NORTHWESTERN NEWS.

Butte, Montana, Visited by Fire—Loss, $300,000.

A SYNDICATE BUYS "THE TACOMA."

Partisan Efforts Against the Washington Constitution—A Pasco Man Still Fighting for the Capital—Railroad Accident.

BUTTE, Mont., Sept. 29.—A fire, supposed to have been incendiary, this afternoon destroyed the finest business block in this city, entailing a loss of $300,000, with insurance about $150,000. The fire started in the uncompleted building owned by J. M. Bowers, and owing to high winds, spread through the whole block, wiping out the most extensive stores in town and one bank. The principal losses are.

D. J. Hennessey Mercantile Company, loss $125,000; insurance, $80,000.

E. H. Sherman, pianos, $8000.

First National bank, $18,000; the books of the bank are safe in the vaults.

Kahnwielers, dry goods, $25,000; insurance, $3000.

Barnard block, $35,000; insurance, $4500.

Bonner Mercantile Company, damage, $65,000, principally by water; fully insured. A number of others suffered slight losses.

THE TACOMA SOLD.

A Syndicate Has Purchased the Big Hotel.

TACOMA, Sept. 29.—A deal has been practically consummated by which the whole property of the Tacoma hotel has been sold to Nelson Bennett, on behalf of a syndicate of Tacoma, New York and St. Paul capitalists. In conversation with THE OREGONIAN correspondent to-night, Mr. Bennett stated that the hotel, while profitable, had been a source of great annoyance to Mr. C. B. Knight, as every disgruntled guest had been in the habit of making a long complaint by letter to him, and as he was getting old and was not in good health, he desired to sell out. Hearing of this and being anxious that the hotel should remain in the hands of people interested in the city, he had formed a syndicate consisting of himself, Allen C. Mason, Colonel Griggs, George Browne, Henry Drum, Walter J. Thompson, of Tacoma, and a New York and St. Paul syndicate headed by General Collis who take a two-fifths interest. The money has been deposited and the transfer will be made as soon as the papers can be signed. The house will be maintained as a first-class hotel and every effort made to keep it up to the highest standard. It has not yet been decided what changes if any will take place in the officers of the house.

The small fire last night was caused by the crossing of electric light wires. The damage done by the fire was very slight, but the firemen lavished water enough on the building to do a large amount of damage.

M. T. Skiff, manager of the Patti-Rosa Company, leaves here for Portland to-morrow to arrange for the appearance of his company in your city during the week beginning October 7.

TO DEFEAT THE CONSTITUTION.

Literature Opposing the Supreme Court Clause Widely Circulated.

OLYMPIA, Wn., Sept. 29.—An immense quantity of literature has been distributed here, presumably by democrats, favoring the rejection of the constitution at the coming election, principally on the grounds that five judges of the supreme court are totally unnecessary, and would be a burden to the people of the new state. It seems to have been forgotten that the standard-bearer of the democratic party, T. C. Griffitts, was the author and able supporter of the five-judge system in opposition to Judge Turner's proposition that the number should be three. It also seems to have been forgotten that the rejection of the constitution will cost the taxpayers of the territory a good many thousand dollars for the holding of a new convention, as the same men will have to be reconvened to make a new constitution or amend the old one, at the expense of the territory this time.

NOT WILLING TO GIVE UP.

A Pasco Man Who Declares His Town Still in the Race for the Capital.

WALLA WALLA, Sept. 29.—The publication of the announcement that Pasco had resigned the fight for the capital meets with a flat denial here from L. D. Pettit, president of the Pasco capital commission, who states that North Yakima offered the commission $6,000 to withdraw from the race, the offer being refused. Pettit told THE OREGONIAN correspondent he had received a letter from W. P. Gray in typewriting, but said he believed the signature to be a forgery. He says there is not a typewriter at Pasco.

The general opinion is, notwithstanding Pettit's denial, that Pasco is out of the race. THE OREGONIAN'S correspondent was told Friday night by a Yakima man that while passing through Pasco Captain Gray told him Pasco had withdrawn in favor of North Yakima.

The Union will contain an advertisement to-morrow morning from Pettit denying the report and still running Pasco for the capital.

ALMOST A SERIOUS WRECK.

An Accident to a Car Containing Valuable Racing Stock.

WALLA WALLA, Sept. 29.—The passenger train due here at 5:30 this morning did not arrive until 2:30 this afternoon, owing to an accident near La Crosse. The train was an hour late leaving Colfax and running fast to make up time. Leaving LaCrosse and descending the Palouse river, the front axle on a stock car broke and the wheels turned flat with the track. The car kept the track, however, though it swayed badly from side to side. The train men knew nothing of the accident until notified by the men in the car crawling out and swinging a lantern. The car was loaded with fourteen fine horses bound for the races here. A number of men were also in the car. The stalls in the car were broken by the horses being thrown against them, but fortunately none were seriously hurt.

It is considered very fortunate that the train stopped so soon. Had it gone a hundred yards farther and struck the high trestle over the Palouse river, probably the whole train would have been derailed.

A MONTANA MURDER.

During a Quarrel a Justice of the Peace Is Fatally Stabbed.

HELENA, Mont., Sept. 29.—A fatal stabbing affray occurred at Jay Gould, near Helena, at an early hour this morning. Frank Duffy, a justice of the peace, and John Glenndening, an amalgamator, quarreled over an old grudge in a saloon row. Finally the justice struck Glenndening and the men clinched. The former secured an advantage, when the latter drew a pocket knife and stabbed Duffy in the shoulder blade and then inflicted an ugly wound in his abdomen that will probably prove fatal. While Glenndening is reported to be a hard case, the stabbing is said to have been in self-defense. He is in jail in this city, awaiting the death of his victim.

PORT TOWNSEND NEWS.

A Large Wharf Being Built—Negotiations for a New Hotel.

PORT TOWNSEND, Sept. 28.—One of the largest wharves on the Sound is now in process of construction at the western limits of Water street. It will cover an area of 412 feet frontage by 250 feet depth and will cost fully $15,000. It will be built in connection with the new foundry and will be for rent. When finished it will be divided into four blocks of four lots each 40x70 feet in size. Streets will be sixty feet wide and alleys twenty feet.

A proposition from two local capitalists with reference to the building of a large hotel has been made to the citizens of this place. The particulars are as follows: If an acceptable block on the hill and $50,000 in money be donated by the people they will erect a hotel and furnish it throughout at a total cost of not less than $150,000.

It is expected that the Chamber of Commerce will succeed in raising the required bonus to-night as the business men here fully recognize the importance of having first-class hotel accommodations.

Yesterday afternoon the business of Pettygrove & Co., was sold to two men from Philadelphia. The purchasers take possession the 1st of October. Mr. Pettygrove will spend the winter in California.

WALLA WALLA NEWS.

Two Footpads Rob a Citizen—A Political Excursion—Preparations for the Fair.

WALLA WALLA, Sept. 29.—Saturday evening Walla Walla citizens to the number of 100, headed by a band of music, had an excursion to Prescott to attend a republican meeting addressed by T. V. Eddy, of Seattle. The speaker was greeted by a full audience.

A man named Hogert was sandbagged on lower Main street about 9 o'clock last night. Two men made the attack and took $15 and a gold watch. Hogert was quite severely injured.

The fair opens in the morning. A large number of horses have arrived from Portland and other points, and are in training for the races. The town is already beginning to be crowded with people. The fair will be a big success.

UNITARIAN CHURCH DEDICATED.

Rev. T. L. Eliot Preaches an Eloquent Sermon Before the Seattle Congregation.

SEATTLE, Sept. 29.—The new Unitarian church, on Seventh street, near Pike, was dedicated to-day, in the presence of a large audience. The dedicatory sermon was preached by the Rev. T. L. Eliot, of Portland, who took for his text words from the Gospel of John, "If ye had known me, ye would have known my Father also." The discourse was very eloquent, and was listened to with much attention.

LA BLANCHE IS JEALOUS.

He Envies Dempsey the Middle Weight Championship of the World.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 29.—The Marine is somewhat nettled because Jack Dempsey was introduced at the Olympic club exhibition last night as the middleweight champion of the world. In the first place his professional choler was raised by Dempsey being placarded at the head of the list of fistic stars, while he got third place and was referred to as "the far-famed Marine," Dempsey being designated as "the world's champion." His reception was cool, compared with that conceded Dempsey, a recently beaten man. The gallery cheered Jack to the echo, and ladies added their gentle applause to the uproar when he was introduced as the middleweight champion of the world. This was too much for the Marine, and he went out to the bar muttering to his sympathizing friends "So he's middleweight champion, is he? Well, we'll see about that."

The Marine has several offers to exhibit at Eastern theaters and he wants the championship as a matter of business.

Although the Marine licked Dempsey fair and square the battle was technically a test between a heavyweight and a middleweight, and in no way except by another fight at weight can the Marine win the coveted title.

Dempsey last week deposited $1000 to bind another match with the Marine, but the money has not been covered. The California Club will give another large purse if the men agree to fight again. Dempsey now authorizes the announcement that to show his earnest desire to meet LaBlanche again he will put up $4000 against $2000 if the Marine agrees to fight him with skin gloves at 54 pounds. Dempsey, however, does not bar a fight at any weight.

SAN FRANCISCO THEATERS.

Amusement Attractions in That City, Past, Present and Future.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 29.—"La Tosca" has only met with moderate success at the Baldwin during the past week, due principally to the fact that the tragic immoral play is becoming offensive to the public. Miss Davenport has another week yet and then "Little Lord Fauntleroy" comes.

McKee Rankin will stay at the Alcazar another week.

Beginning to-morrow night "The Canuck" will be given.

"A Brass Monkey" crowded the California theatre every night last week despite the unusually warm weather. It will run a couple of weeks yet.

Hermann, the magician, is doing good business at the Bush street. Most of his tricks, though somewhat stale, are done cleverly. After another week he will be followed by Joe Grismer in "The Tigress."

At the Tivoli Opera house "Theodora" has done excellent business for two weeks, and it will serve another, alternating with "La Fille de Mme. Angot."

Gilmore's San Francisco musical festival which opens here November 1, is arousing considerable interest in musical circles. Gilmore, with his complete band, minus the vocal artists, are this week filling an engagement at the St. Louis exposition, whence they will proceed into the Northwest, and come to this city via Denver.

DANGER AHEAD FOR THE RUSH.

It Is Reported That Canadian Seamen Will Make Trouble.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 29.—An Examiner special from Ottawa, Ont., says that British Columbia advices to-day state that on her way South shortly the United States cruiser Rush will call at Victoria, and it is feared that trouble will arise between the crews of the seized sealing schooners and their friends, and the crew of the Rush, if the latter attempts to anchor in the harbor.

Crews of the sealers, who are now nearly all at Victoria, are in the wildest state of excitement over the loss of the summer's work and the confiscation of their sealskins. They say that if they cannot get redress through the British government they will take it out of the cruiser that stole their skins if she puts in at Victoria. The militia is to be held ready to prevent or put down any attack on the Rush.

PACIFIC COAST TEMPLARS.

Over Seven Hundred Will Go to the Triennial Conclave.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 29.—The Knights Templar commanderies of Oakland, Fresno and Los Angeles left by special train this evening for Washington to attend the triennial conclave to be held in that city next week.

The Golden Gate and Sacramento commanderies will leave to-morrow and the California commandery on Tuesday. A careful estimate of the number who will be in the grand parade on Thursday, October 10, at Washington, from this coast, representing California, Oregon, Nevada, Washington and Arizona show nearly 700 Sir Knights added to this number. There will be fully 500 ladies who will accompany the pilgrims.

AUSTRALIAN GOLD.

A Shipment of $2,500,000 Representing the Balance of Trade With that Continent.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 29.—The steamer Alameda which arrived yesterday from the Australian continent, brought the largest shipment of treasure that has arrived in many years. In the treasure room of the ship was 100,000 English sovereigns consigned to the Hong Kong and Shanghai banking corporation of this city, and the Anglo-California bank had a shipment of 330,000 sovereigns—in all about $2,250,000. This sum is consigned to these banks in payment for balance due on American produce purchased in Australia, and shows how valuable is trade with the Australian colonies. In a few days the sovereigns will all go to the mint to be coined into Yankee fives, tens and twenties.

GOVERNMENT VESSELS.

There Are Six of Them Now in the Harbor of San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 29.—The United States steamer Gedney has arrived from Coos bay, after making soundings along the Northern California and Southern Oregon coast for the coast survey. The arrival of the Gedney makes the number of government vessels now in the harbor six all told, including the Charleston. The United States war vessel Pinta, which has been laid up at Mare Island, is now anchored in the stream, and it is said she is under orders to proceed to sea.

CALIFORNIA NEWS ITEMS.

A Mexican Heiress.

MONTEREY, Cal., Sept. 29.—Quite a stir has been caused in society circles here during the past few days by the arrival of young and beautiful Miss Ysabel Echeguren, of Mexico. She is the daughter of Senor Francisco Echeguren, of Mazatlan, the Spanish consul there, whose vast wealth has caused him to be known as the Vanderbilt of the Mexican republic. He is said to be worth $30,000,000, and Miss Ysable is his only daughter and the heiress to one-third this fortune.

The Monument to Marshall.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Sept. 28.—The committee selected by the legislature to erect a monument in honor of J. W. Marshall, discoverer of gold in California, held a meeting to-night and formally accepted the monument made by Sculptor Wells, of San Francisco, and ordered the payment of his claim. The statue will be unveiled at Coloma, Eldorado county, the site of the discovery of gold, next May, under the auspices of the Native Sons of the Golden West.

Consul Doty Will Go to His Post.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 29.—J. Lamb Doty, United States consul to Tahiti, arrived to-night from Europe where he has been on a visit to the Paris exposition and other points on the continent. Doty when questioned regarding reports of his engagement to Miss Palowa Crander, a member of a leading family of Tahiti, said there was absolutely no truth in the report. Consul Doty sails for his post Wednesday on the brig Tropic Bird.

A Burglar Killed.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Sept. 29.—At 11 o'clock to-night E. C. Keyser, nightwatchman at Carroll's fruit cannery shot and killed a burglar who had gained an entrance to the place with a companion by pulling off a couple of boards. A number of thefts had recently been committed there and Keyser was lying in wait with a double-barreled shotgun. The other burglar escaped. Keyser surrendered himself.

EASTERN DISPATCHES.

Bogus Medical Colleges Turning Out Licensed Quacks.

EXTENT OF OREGON'S FOSSIL BEDS

Politics in the Two Dakotas—Mrs. Surratt's Prosecutor a Common Drunk in a Police Court—Fred Douglass Goes to Hayti.

BOSTON, Sept. 29.—A special from Portsmouth, N. H., says a great sensation was caused there by the discovery of another bogus college of medicine, similar in management and larger in extent than Druid college of Maine, a full expose of which was made some years ago. This latest chartered institution is the Trinity University of Medicine and Surgery, having its nominal headquarters at Bennington, Vt.

Its methods of business briefly told are these: Any person desiring to buy a diploma covering both medicine and surgery has, if possessing necessary money, been given his choice of the following institutions, all of which exist merely on paper: The University of Cincinnati, Montreal Medical College, New York State Medical College, Trenton (N. J.) Medical College, University of New Hampshire, Trinity University of Medicine and Surgery.

The value of the sheepskins representing the above institutions has varied from [illegible] each. There is no doubt but that hundreds of them have been purchased throughout the West and South, while New England alone has been victimized by scores.

Dr. Adams, of Manchester, chairman of the state board of censors, while pursuing his official investigations in the state department, discovered the incorporation of the institution, about which he immediately became suspicious. It was the University of New Hampshire, nominally located at Nashua, and officered by Fred Q. Wheaton as president, and H. F. Bradbury, M. D., secretary. In the course of his investigation he discovered that these persons were connected with the Trinity University of Bennington. Though passing under other names, Bradbury was also doing an active business in Lowell, under the name of Dr. Freeland.

There it was learned that a large correspondence was received showing a vast amount of mail was sent from and delivered at Bennington, Lowell, Nashua and Boston. This probably was only a small per cent. of the existing evidence relative to the great systematic swindling that was being done.

Bradbury, it was learned, formerly figured as "Dr. Ripley," and of 71 Cornhill street, Boston, where all the correspondence appertaining to "Trinity University" was forwarded. When Dr. Adams's agents had completed their negotiations with Ripley, it was agreed that diplomas of Trinity university should be delivered to them upon the receipt of a handsome financial consideration. This was done. A newspaper, which was working up the case, volunteering to provide paper for sheepskin. As soon as it was evident that a criminal case had been made out the matter was given in charge of the authorities, and it is probable that important developments will take place within a day or two.

OREGON'S FOSSIL DEPOSITS.

An Interesting Extract From the Report of the Princeton Expedition.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—The Princeton college expedition which was sent out some time ago for the purpose of examining the fossil deposits in the mountains of Oregon has returned, bringing much information valuable to the scientific world. Their investigations lay chiefly in the John Day lake region. Their report concludes with this outline of the extent of the discoveries made:

"Could we reproduce a view of that ancient Oregon when John Day lake existed we should find ourselves in a very strange animal world. There were little three-toed horses hardly larger than donkeys, rhinoceri, camels, peccaries and a great assemblage of large and fierce cat-like, dog-like and hyena-like animals, not to mention hosts of little rabbits and squirrel-like creatures. The animals of this time were all rather small, the largest being the entelodon, a beast not unlike the hippopotamus in size and general appearance. As the list shows, this assemblage had a very oriental character. The climate was perhaps rather milder than the present, and the forests, of which the leaf beds on Bridge creek give ample illustration, were like those now found in the warmer parts of the United States. This wonderful museum of a buried world has been sealed up by subsequent lava floods, and is now accessible only on the sides of canyons and valleys, where streams have cut down through the overlying masses. The result of our summer's work was nearly two tons of the fossil remains of these animals, a striking proof of the vast number of them which have been preserved."

POLITICS IN THE DAKOTAS.

Prospects of Republican Success—South Dakota Capital Fight.

BISMARCK, Dak., Sept. 29.—Next Tuesday will be the greatest event in the history of North and South Dakota. The garb of statehood will then be donned, and the election of the new state's first officers will occur; every voter feels the importance of the occasion, and it is thought that a full vote will be cast. The most conservative place the republican majority in North Dakota at 5000, and in South Dakota at 15,000. Prohibition will cut but a small figure, although it is considerably livelier than in any previous election. Prohibition tracts and prohibition newspapers have suddenly sprung up and are liberally scattered throughout the territory. The greatest battle in North Dakota will be on the constitution. The prospects are, however, that the constitution will be adopted by a close vote.

THE CAPITAL CONTEST IN SOUTH DAKOTA.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—Advices from Dakota state that the struggle for the location of the capital in South Dakota is growing very exciting. One of the leading candidates for a state office writes to Washington that $600,000 will not defray the legitimate expenses of four or five of the places that are working for the prize, while the amount being expended by railroad, land and other corporations and private individuals cannot be estimated. Some of the cities competing have gone beyond the legitimate use of money to secure the coveted prize. They are arranging to vote Indians on the Sioux reservation, and with that in view are colonizing redskins. It is alleged that Pierre is doing this thing.

In official circles much interest is manifested concerning the capital location fight in South Dakota, although no preference is expressed. The election simply decides the temporary location—the location for two years—at the end of which time the permanent location will be determined by ballot. An impression prevails just now that Huron or Mitchell will win, although Sioux Falls and Pierre have been prime favorites heretofore. Huron appears to have made very good combinations with distant towns.

A COMMON DRUNK.

The Public Prosecutor of Mrs. Surratt Stands in the Police Court.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—General G. Foster, who was formerly connected with the department of justice at Washington, and to whom the determined prosecution and subsequent hanging of Mrs. Surratt was principally due, stood in a line of prisoners in the Harlem police court yesterday with but little in his appearance to distinguish him from other "drunks." On leaving official life General Foster came to New York and dropped into a law practice with $15,000 or $20,000 a year, and was courted on all sides. He collected a fine law library, became a Mason of high rank, and was prominent in the Grand Army. Less than a year ago he began the downward grade, after some domestic trouble. Mrs. Foster and her two daughters now live down town somewhere. From being unusually neat in his dress he has grown to look like a tramp, and he has no money except what he begs from those who may have known him in better days.

A MYST[illegible]Y SOLVED.

A Trag dy o Eighteen Years Ago Unearthed.

A SHOALWATER BAY ROMANCE

A Few Facts About Sealand, Oysterville and Other Places—How the Election is Going To-morrow

OLYMPIA, Sept. 29.—While at Sealand, in Pacific county a few days ago, a grim skeleton was found in some burning brush by J W Suprenant which cleared up a mystery of eighteen years standing, and showed clearly that a tragedy had been enacted, the details of which are known only to the murderer if he is still on the face of the earth Mr Suprenant is the superintendent of construction of the Ilwaco Railway & Navigation Company He found the skull and part of the remaining bones of the body near where the railroad wharf running out into Shoalwater bay adjoins the shore and close to the old trail which led from Oysterville to Fisher s house, at the head of the bay

Eighteen years ago Charles Green, sheriff of Pacific county mysteriously disappeared and it was supposed by many that he had absconded with funds of the county His bonds men were compelled to make the amount good and as the years rolled by the affair was forgotten The sheriff in those days was compelled, by law to collect taxes He had been away from Oysterville in the southeastern section of the county for some weeks engaged in that duty and started from Fisher s homeward with about $600 in his possession. It is said that he told Fisher who is yet living at the head of the bay, that he felt as if he was being followed He has never been seen alive in the county since he left Fisher s for his home and in the search that was made for him after his disappearance he was tracked on the lonely trail as far as the vicinity of where Sealand is now situated and there all trace of him was lost Green I am told was a native of Finland and came to Oysterville the county seat, some years before his election as sheriff from Alaska making a perilous trip in an open canoe He had been engaged in fishing in that far off country He was an intelligent well informed man of undoubted courage and honesty and during his stay in Oysterville married a half breed by whom he had a son now living at Bay Center who has grown to manhood and is running a "plunger" on Shoalwater bay Mr Suprenant on examining the skull found that it contained a gold pivot tooth which Green had in his jaw while living—a round bullet hole through the skull told the story of the manner of his death The skull which was picked up and laid in front of the construction mess house was examined by several of the old settlers who remembered the mysterious affair while the son of the murdered man himself was shown the scant and ghastly remains of his father whom he had known only in his boyhood days There were many hard characters in Pacific county in the days of the war and a few years after it, said an old friend of the missing sheriff "and I never believed he ran away I always supposed he was murdered" There was no such place as Sealand then and but a narrow trail led from Oysterville down to the head of the bay and over toward the Columbia river Will the county have to refund the money to his bondsmen if it is proven that Green was murdered? seemed to be a speculation among some of the citizens of Oysterville who saw the bones

While at Sealand where there is considerable clearing going on, Hon E G Cosgrove gave practical illustration of the effects of his early education in the woods of Northwestern Ohio by removing his plug hat and broadcloth coat and felling a good sized fir tree with an ax borrowed from a woodsman It was almost as good exercise for the orator as making a speech, and brought out the perspiration freely on that part of his anatomy on top of his head which resembles a clearing itself skirted with foliage. As the tree fell Mr Cosgrove was dubbed by Major Thad Huston "the Gladstone of Washington" Then Mr Cosgrove borrowed a fowling piece and scoured the woods for game returning in an hour with an empty game bag One of the party was mean enough to insinuate that he would not have returned so empty handed if he could have bought a sand hen from a wandering hunter

Shoalwater bay is the natural home of the oyster Bay Center appears to be the liveliest town on the bay for oyster raising and shipping Oysterville was formerly the greatest shipping point, but the town appears to be as calm and peaceful and quiet as the succulent bivalve from which it takes its name It is the county seat but will not remain so very long unless there is some new blood infused into the place. Placing the terminus of the narrow gauge road four miles below it at Sealand has left it in the lurch Why was the road not extended there I asked. Because its people haven t energy enough to scratch when itching was the reply It once had 300 or 400 inhabitants now it has about half that number and there are many vacant houses there. Other places in the county are growing It is dying and to revive it there is talk of running a motor line to that point and to Stackpole harbor three miles beyond. The latter is said to be the finest harbor on the bay It is fifteen miles from Oysterville to the mouth of the entrance of Shoalwater bay Sealand has a wharf reaching out into deep water 1806 feet long—Oysterville has no wharf To land there one has to be carried piggy back. This riding ashore on a man s broad shoulders through the surf—the man with gum boots on up to his arm pits—is a very funny proceeding It was indulged in by Cosgrove, Huston and the writer at 3 o clock one morning at North Cove opposite Oysterville and all hands were so full of laughter that the propelling power like to have laid down in the water to get a fresh hold I saw hundreds of sacks of oysters landed on the cars at Sealand for Astoria, Portland and San Francisco From five hundred to a thousand sacks of oysters are shipped every month but from 1860 to 1870 I am informed that the shipments were much heavier and that the Eastern oyster has largely taken the place in San Francisco of the small bivalves. At Oysterville a rara avis was met in the person of Judge Miles Standish Griswold, who was going to vote against the constitution and induce others to do so and yet intended to vote for some of the candidates thereon His special objection to the constitution was that the word "God" was not inserted in the document

There is considerable growling, and justly so, on Shoalwater bay at the mail facilities Some years ago it was worse than at present. The mail steamer Tom Morris, which runs irregularly is only licensed to carry twelve persons and is frequently overloaded On Wednesday it had thirty nine passengers and ten enormously large trunks There is room for one or two good steamers on the bay as traffic is increasing every day

The campaign ends to-morrow night, with entire confidence in the success of the state constitution and the election of the republican state ticket by a majority ranging from 7000 to 10 000. A large majority of the state legislature on joint ballot is assured to the republicans from all reports received by John F Gowey chairman, and H N Fairweather vice chairman, thus insuring the election of two republican United States senators These reports are from reliable sources throughout the state. CIVIL SERVICE LAW VIOLATED.

A Serious Allegation Against the Commissioners

WASHINGTON Sept 29.—The Post will to-morrow publish a story, editorially in which it charges the civil service commissioners under the Cleveland administration with persistently violating the law, and asserts its ability to prove the charge before a congressional investigating committee It charges that three fourths of the clerks employed by the commission were not required to pass the examination, that one of the clerks gave out or sold the examination papers and that the matter was brought to the attention of President Cleveland by Commissioner Oberly but was hushed up for reasons personal to Commissioner Lyman

SUGAR FROM SORGHUM.

Secretary Rusk Doubts of Favorable Results Will Be Reached

WASHINGTON, Sept 29.—Secretary Rusk who has returned after an inspection of the mills for the manufacture of sugar from sorghum cane by the new diffusion process, to-day said I can not say that it has proven a success as yet The government chemists stationed at the mills are at work to find out ways of improving on the results which we now get but unless that can be done I am very doubtful where the profit of making sugar from sorghum will come Three or four of the chemists however are still hopeful of favorable results.

BRITISH SYNDICATE RUMORS.

Reports of Minneapolis Investments Can not Be Verified

CHICAGO, Sept 29.—A dispatch from Minneapolis says that C A Pillsbury was interviewed regarding the story of British syndicate purchases He had heard there was an option on the Washburne Mills but thought it would take a great deal of money to get them. The manager of the Cargill system of elevators refused to talk on the matter and the manager of the [illegible] and Star systems of elevators said they had not been sold

WAS THIS [illegible] A [illegible]?

Theories That He Was Not the Real [illegible]

CHICAGO Sept 29.—T[illegible] to solve the [illegible] but is murder but they [illegible] the [illegible] of [illegible]. The most important of the three narratives is quoted upon the authority of an alleged well known lawyer whose name is withheld He says that he was consulted professionally the day after the murder by one of the two men who did the killing James Gillan an ex convict now dead Tascott s connection with the case is explained in his version by the statement that Gillan had hidden the plunder in Tascott s room during the latter s absence from the city

The sensational feature of the story is the unqualified statement that Gillan on his death bed at the county hospital six months ago made a full confession of the crime to Father J Sullivan, of St Jarlath s Catholic church Dramatic alleged details as to Father Sullivan s horror stricken appearance after learning the secret are given accompanied by a description of the holy peace that immediately appeared on the face of the dying convict Father Sullivan was seen to day and emphatically denied the story

One of the other two stories had is that the millionaire was slain by a pair of toughs who were hired by a mysterious third party

The third tale is to the effect that professional burglars whose identity is not even hinted at killed Snell, as an incident in the course of their professional occupation, and have since disposed of Tascott against whom suspicion was unjustly directed The trimmings of this article are that Tascott was an illegitimate son and that after the tragedy he was hidden for months in his mother s house disguised as a servant girl and was taken by her to the Pacific coast

The conclusion is in the nature of a vague suggestion that he was subsequently killed by the real criminals in Alaska To night the Gillan story was exploded even more thoroughly than it had been by Father Sullivan. The sergeant at the West Lake street police station showed by reference to his records that the man said to have confessed to the murder was at the time of the crime safe under lock and key in his cell many blocks from the mansion of the illfated millionaire.

A LAUDANUM DRINKER.

Like Coleridge and DeQuincey, Wilkie Collins Was a Devotee of Opium

LONDON Sept 29.—The World prints the following article over the signature of Edmund Yates on the life of Wilkie Collins "It was during the progress of The Moonstone that Wilkie Collins first acquired the baleful habit of taking sedatives which he continued more or less throughout his life Excited beyond measure by the constant nerve pressure created by the necessity of having every thread of his story constantly with in his grasp suffering under a sharp attack of rheumatic gout in his eyes and distracted at the same time by the serious illness of his mother to whom he was devotedly attached Wilkie Collins did as Coleridge DeQuincey and no end of other eminent men in the fraternity had done before him He sought and found relief in anodynes. From what he himself told me and from what I heard from friends of greater intimacy with him I believe that about this period and for the greater part of his afterlife Wilkie Collins was in the habit of taking daily and without apparent serious effect more laudanum—not Batley's nor any other minimizing solution but absolutely pure—than would have sufficed to kill an entire ship s crew or a whole company of soldiers This amount was of course arrived at slowly and by degrees."

An actor who knew Collins intimately remarked at the funeral of the novelist "I have seen Collins drink five glasses of laudanum at one swallow without it affecting him in the least He suffered some injury when a young man which rendered it necessary that he should take opium to kill pain Life would have been almost unbearable to him without it.

THE BEHRING SEA DISPUTE.

The British Minister Instructed to Proceed Quietly in the Matter

LONDON Sept 29.—Lord Salisbury has instructed Sir Julian Pauncefote the British minister at Washington to consult the convenience of Secretary of State Blaine in reference to the discussion of the Behring sea dispute. Negotiations are to proceed quietly and continuously and inquiry is to be carefully pursued into the question of Canadian compensation for the seizure of vessels belonging to Canada in the waters in contention

No immediate pressure however is to be exercised upon the government at Washington with regard to settling the international question involved and nothing like a formal demand for a speedy conclusion of the affair is to be allowed

The line of action which has been decided upon by Lord Salisbury, is based on his expectation that Secretary Blaine who is just now hampered by the lease of the Alaska Sealing and Fishing Company will be more ready to accord what England regards as a just settlement of the dispute upon the approaching expiration of the company s lease When that occurs it is expected that the British government will push the negotiations with a little more energy

THE AGRICULTURAL SCHOOL.

A Brief and Forcible Statement of the Good That It Accomplishes

A Knowledge of Farming is Inculcated, Combined With a Cultivation of Intellect That Will Greatly Benefit the Nation.

The New York Sun says Next to the secretary of agriculture in the Federal government, a professor of agriculture in a college is the most absurd and imposing amongst human delusions

This is a strange utterance to come from a once great newspaper and stranger still that it should meet the approval of any reader

What foundation has this objection but these old fogies have against teaching the agricultural classes and whence the criticism so often heard of our agricultural schools that they are too theoretical that farming can t be taught by professors, etc

In all this section land is made productive by irrigation and I doubt whether there is a book amongst them upon the science of irrigating A farmer in doubt about some problem of irrigation goes to his neighbor asks him how it should be done and obtains his limited information, and in a small community and during an average human life, doubtless the knowledge of how this work is best done may reach a considerable degree of development.

How great a contrast there is between this method and that which obtains in every other branch of human knowledge.

The lawyer for instance however limited his income and means has the greater part of his savings invested in works of legal lore some of the highest antiquity His art of determining whether farmer A or farmer B owns the irrigated ranch aforesaid has frequently by his predecessors been brought to such a degree of refinement that it has actually over reached itself and has required a strong effort on the part of his clients to strip it of its senseless subtleties and bring it back to a basis of common sense They no sooner turn the broad light of reason upon his art than he as do the votaries of every other specialized branch of knowledge under similar circumstances goes burrowing again like a mole under his black letter and saves no time trouble nor expense to keep the ignorant from accompanying him

Yet, irrigation is older than law medicine etc and the farmer has a prejudice against sending his boy to a school that teaches about the science of irrigation! I am afraid he is likely to be accused of the plantation philosopher's objection touching his son's collegiate attainments

Ef Ebo keeps larnin
At dat school
Nex thing he ll be provin'
Ise a fool

And is not the contempt for an agricultural school somewhat like a eunuch s contempt for marriage?

Civil engineering was not many years ago like farming only a trade No schools taught it, no professors imposed its principles upon a deluded public and young men did not study it because they never heard of such a calling Even to-day many countrymen think that a civil engineer is a man who dresses in a blue blouse and greases a locomotive engine for a living American civil engineers are now however the most useful and honored of our citizens It was thought rather foolish by the New York Sun of a former day that a man should undertake to design and build a stone bridge without learning with chisel and mallet in hand to cut a cubical block from a piece of limestone, or that a man could build a steel bridge across a river without actually first learning to weld a steel point on an Irish man s dulled pick or how, in the name of goodness it was ever possible for a general to wield the armies of this republic against the foe as Sullivan uses his good right hand without ever knowing how to boil a pot of beans for a hungry trooper, is a problem that strikes these old fogies with amazement—a kind of pons asinorum that goes up asses under its arches like sheep sent over a bluff by a Montana blizzard

The work of the farm hand has been degraded to a low degree of unskilled labor In some of the states their wage is as low as $8 a month It is nowhere followed as a matter of choice it is distasteful full of hardship, with no redeeming features and consequently illy done Thousands of young men of the best brawn and brain in the East leave their native states for the new West for no other reason than that this employment there is almost hopelessly branded them with social inferiority and puts them upon a footing of equality with negroes, flunkeys and Chinese coolies

It is safe living in a republic only when the balance of the voting power is in the hands of this same class—the farming class —who should be an intelligent class and are in every land beyond the reach of corruption or bribery

The agricultural colleges are maintained for the purpose of teaching young men and old a knowledge of farming and with it to cultivate generally the intellect of this class to establish a country society to elevate and purify their manners and keep their morals above those influences which cities nowadays exert even in the remotest districts and to make our yeomanry the equal of the old time gentry

The effort has its difficulties it is true —True when the son comes back from one of these colleges (the position resembling that of the educated Indian returned to the reservation) he encounters a pretty tough shell of ignorance which looks with scornful contempt upon a youth who carries his head erect his shoulders back has the gait of a free man talks English who is proud of his vocation not ashamed of his caste and holds himself the equal of even a railroad man True they will insist as strenuously as that old dame, the New York Sun upon a return at once to the breech clout the living in a wigwam and insist on the superiority of the chase to cultivation of the soil how much better camas is than Grand Ronde flour, how a tough and starved buffalo is better than a stall fed Durham how much grass on the hills is better than alfalfa and timothy in a silo the continued swimming of a river better than the building of a bridge and how far more sensible and worthy of a true brave it is to continue to crumble a horseback around a tree fallen across the trail than to spend an hour in removing the obstruction

Our yeomanry are now and not without some show of reason the butt of ridicule of the whole country, that is, if the newspapers hold a mirror up to nature A flockmaster out west comes to town and modestly tackles a buyer for a sale of his wool This buyer is perhaps a Jew with plenty of gall and the way he hectors it over the gentle shepherd is ridiculous He who raises enough all wool suits to clothe an army is himself clad like a beggar and is overreached by an Israelitic heathen who would hardly be allowed to camp within the walls of a Christian city And the farmer goes driving along with a wagon that cost him at least twice its real value, all painted red, white green and blue and the name of the carpenter that made it and of the highway man in that old it displayed in big red letters, an advertisement which he hauls about the country without money and without price Such an implement under the eyes of his children is as much an offense to their esthetic taste as the accordion or organ is to their musical taste We have not observed on the table of the richany advertisement of the farmers dairy in the shape of a cow impressed upon the butter and ringed streaked and striped bellowing for further patronage

One result of the agricultural colleges is going to be to bring this assumed superiority of the trading class to its knees as effectually as if it were struck between the eyes with a battle axe ' The professor may succeed also in teaching the farmer's boy that when he undertakes to make a gate to keep at it until the gate is made however the neighbors may hang around and insist that the gate when half way done is good enough for Oregon and it s time to quit and go a fishing It will be worth a whole year s tuition Suppose he goes further than this and instills into his mind the principle of thoroughness that allows him that it may be extended to other things besides gates and he will [illegible] the [illegible] renovation with all the book full of pictures of gates cross sections plan elevation and all—from a common Gate bt en English quare country seat down to an Oregon farm, that marks a new era on the premises every time it is dragged open —why even then his father may overpower him with ridicule but a son may one day be born to that home who work on the farm will be to him as great a source of satisfaction and gratification as all work is when thoroughly done

A professor of agriculture is not so imposing august or dangerous a character as the Sun paints him The writer had the privilege of meeting some months since those of our college at Corvallis and they impress one as being rather on the contrary remarkable for their modesty, their courtesy and the rare skill and ability in imparting to the students a technical as well as a general education such as is needed by our farming class They have a good farm now, a fairly good building and the apparatus necessary The climate and country about Corvallis are so beautiful that even a residence there of four years or a briefer period is in itself a liberal education for a farmer s lad The state might well feel proud of the young men and women enrolled there now as students

I have not space nor the ability to describe in detail the various departments of this seat of learning but can only say generally that it deserves the earnest support of every citizen of the state Intellectual superiority is above all others the most difficult to establish but when once established in an individual or a class it resists the tooth of time and the erasure of oblivion, and it alone can lift the rural classes out of the deplorable condition into which they have now fallen a condition in many parts of the country little better than that of hewers of wood and haulers of water to their more fortunate countrymen N

CHRONOMETER OF THE "POLARIS."

A Clock That Was Buried in Arctic Ice for Four Years

Washington Star

In the desk of Edson R Brace chief clerk of the bureau of equipment and recruiting in the navy department, is a little rosewood case bound and inlaid with brass and bronze It is in the form of a cube, about eighteen inches high and containing a chronometer such as is used on all naval vessels This little instrument has quite a tragic history and is held of considerable value It was the ship's chronometer of the unfortunate Polaris that was sent out on an Arctic expedition by the navy department in 1871 When the Polaris was nipped in the ice Captain Hall saved this instrument and some other things from the vessel As long as Captain Hall survived he kept the chronometer with him When he perished it was buried in the Arctic snows and abandoned This was some time in 1872. For four winters it lay buried in the snow and ice

In 1876 Captain Nares of the British navy now Sir George Nares then in command of the last royal expedition to the Arctic region discovered this chronometer at Newman's bay He dug it out of the snow and took it to England with him on his return It had been buried in the snow for four years in a region where the mercury sinks to 104 degrees below freezing point. It was found to be in perfect order and was wound and ran all right as soon as taken from its cold bed On returning to England Captain Nares turned the instrument over to the British admiralty office from whence it was sent as a present to this government With all this experience it loses only a single second in twenty four hours

CAN LIFE BE PROLONGED?

The prolongation of human life the restoration of decayed functions to their normal activity by electricity, even when suggested as a remote possibility rouse and chain the attention When this suggestion is made by a man whose record of achievements has given him a reputation on two continents and whose statements are always received with respect if not with deference incredulity forgets to smile, and we listen with the feeling that the path of discovery always runs through apparent impossibilities No snap judgment avails in this modern age To say of anything that it can't be done is to exhibit ignorance of what has been done The age of miracles is not in the past, but in the present and future We walk in the company of marvels every day, which the science of electricity has recently achieved Dr Darrin has at any rate given us something serious to think about, and encouraged the hope of new victories over the ills to which flesh is heir by his system of electro magnetic treatment as the following references show

Geo H Papenberg Tualitan, Or —Deafness ten years so he could scarcely hear a sound, cured in twenty minutes

It is further by the Dempsey side that Jack never rethe Marine a second meeting, but that on Dempsey heard that La had backers he hunted up the Marine or notice he was ready to cover the money. doubt that after La Blanche was by Dempsey, it was hard for the to find backers. Now, however, is altered. La Blanche is the and Dempsey, who is most eager to can get backed for a large stake to Marine once more and definitely settle disputed question whether the recent was caused by a chance blow. Dempsey's who are very ardent in the matter, say will to-day put up $1000 as a forfeit match in the California club under conditions that governed the late fight shall be the same, and they will even the men fighting at catch weights; anyto get another match or give their man the chance which all fair minded patrons of boxing think he deserves in view of his long record of victories with but one defeat. It is understood that if the pugilists agree to another meeting the California club will give a purse sufficiently substantial for any champions to fight for. This purse, with the added stake, will make the winnings unusually large. The Dempsey side say, however, that a large purse is not their chief object, and their man will, in fact, fight for anything or nothing sooner than miss a chance to retrieve his laurels. The prospects of the large purse are offered, however, to tempt the Marine to forego the pleasures of indolence and take once more to hard training. They do not insist that the match shall take place immediately; all that they ask is that the Marine shall cover Dempsey's forfeit of $1000 to bind a match before he leaves the city. Considering the good showing made by La Blanche in his late fight with Dempsey there ought to be no trouble in his getting all the backing he desires. Plenty of people who went to the fight with the impression that Dempsey could win with ease, came away with the belief that he could not win at all, and if the men meet again with big gloves, as they will have to if they meet at all, La Blanche is likely to be a hot favorite.—San Francisco Chronicle.

PICKED UP ABOUT ALBINA.

Grading of Streets—More New Buildings—Applications for Work—Water Mains—Roving Bovines—Sanguinary Husband.

The grading of Abernethy avenue has been completed for some time, with the exception of two gulches which are to be filled and bridged. The avenue from Russell street looks completed, and consequently many teams drive on it, off from Russell street, and are compelled to turn back. As some will drive very rapidly and there are no signs of danger an accident is liable to happen at any time especially at night. This should be remedied at once. It is better to finish one street completely than have several half done.

GRADING.

Hawley and Idaho avenues are graded and ready for track laying for the motor line as far as the north limits of Albina. Division street is being graded on the extended line leading to St. Johns Some time ago Judge Catlin stopped the work on this street, as it was a county road, but a compromise has been effected and the railway company have agreed to build a county road a block north of the present one. Unless the company built railway on this street they would lose $1500 of the $15,000 subsidy which has been subscribed. Therefore it became necessary for them to make this change of roads.

ATTEMPT TO KILL.

Mrs. Holt had her husband arrested last Wednesday on the charge of attempt to kill. Holt is in the habit of drinking, and when under the influence of liquor becomes very unreasonable. They had had some trouble about signing papers to some property in Kansas, but finally this was compromised. Mrs. Holt signified her intention to go to Walla Walla, where she expected some employment. This exasperated Holt, and hence his attempt to kill. He was tried before Justice Randall and bound over for $500 to keep the peace.

MANY APPLICANTS.

Since the car shops started up there have been numerous applications for work. Many have been refused on account of the scarcity of material to work with. A large order for lumber has been made out by the superintendent. It is then intended to gradually increase the force of workmen as the supply of material becomes more plentiful.

HOODLUMISM.

It would be well if the marshal or his deputy would take a stroll once in a while during the night up on Nob Hill, as there is considerable hooting and hoodlumism going on at late hours. It will be necessary soon to have an officer in that portion of the city.

FINISHING TOUCHES.

The workmen on the electric railway are engaged in stringing the center wire which runs over the track and connects with the motor. If work progresses as rapidly in East Portland as in Albina, the cars will be running by November 1.

LAYING MAINS.

The Albina Water Company have been busy for some time laying mains into Central Albina and Multnomah. This will be greatly appreciated by the residents who have had to have their supply of water furnished by the water cart.

ON A VISIT.

Mr. and Mrs. Murphy, of Woodburn City, are visiting their son, Contractor M. S. Murphy, on Nob Hill, and will remain for some time. Mrs. Hill, of Eugene, is visiting her son, Rev. G. W. Hill.

WILL GIVE A CONCERT.

The Society of Merry Workers, composed of children belonging to the sewing society of the Presbyterian Sunday school, will give a concert Wednesday evening at the Presbyterian church.

NEARLY READY FOR GRAIN.

The painters will start in to day to paint the grain elevator. The double floors above the bins will be finished by Wednesday, and grain can be taken in by the last of the week.

NEEDS A BARBER.

Nob Hill needs a good barber shop, as the population has grown so large, and it is some distance to walk down to lower Albina every time a shave is wanted.

MORE STORE BUILDINGS.

Three large stores are being built on the south side of Russell street by John Gumbert, on the ground formerly owned by the Albina Water Co.

ALAS! THOSE ROVING COWS.

It is about time Albina had a cow ordinance. Many property owners are complaining of having their gardens destroyed by the night-roving cow.

IMPROVEMENTS.

Houses are so scarce that parties having woodsheds or barns are having them changed into cottages, so as to help accommodate the demand.

FROM THE EAST.

Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Goffe, of Champaign, Ill., are the guests of Dr. and Mrs. J. J. Fisher, and will remain several weeks.

TO BE ORGANIZED.

An Odd Fellows lodge is to be organized this week in this prosperous city.

PERSONALS.

Mr. J. G. Schatz and family have moved to Washougal.

Judge J. P. Randall has been ill for some time, but is now able to get around on crutches.

Mr. J. M. Pittenger and wife have returned from their trip East, very much improved in health.

Mr. L. W. Loughary and wife, of Monmouth, Polk county, are in the city, visiting their daughter, Mrs. Rev. J. L. Hershner.

BAKER CITY NEWS.

BAKER CITY, Sept. 26.

O. Szortagh, of San Francisco, one of the parties who bought the Baisley mine, returned from the East to-day, where he has been perfecting the organization of a company to work this property. The final payment of $150,000 will be made the first of October, and active work will begin at once.

The Eastern Oregon District fair, which opens here on October 8, will attract a large number of prominent horsemen from all parts of the state. The noted flyers, Rolly Bolly and Jou Jou, are each entered in several races, and barring bad weather there will be a large attendance at the fair. The pavilion is being thoroughly refitted throughout, and sufficient space is already applied for to assure a fine display of our natural products.

S. A. Hulner's fine three-story brick is fast nearing completion. This will be a fine building.

There are over 400 pupils in attendance at the public school, and though we boast of the largest and handsomest public-school building in eastern Oregon, we find it already taxed to its utmost capacity to accommodate all pupils now in attendance.

There are a great number of strangers visiting the city, consequently our hotels are all full. The great need of Baker City is a larger and better hotel. This we will have when the Warshauer house is finished, which will be not later than the 1st of January, 1890.

THE NATIONAL BULLETIN.

Eastern Crop—Weather Report for the Week Ending September 21.

Summary of the Remarks Received at Washington, D. C., From the Different State Weather Bureaus—The Outlook.

The following information relative to Eastern weather and crops is taken from the national crop-weather bulletin for the week ending September 21:

TEMPERATURE.

The week ending September 21 has been colder than usual in the Northwest, the upper lake region and the Ohio valley, the greatest departures from the normal temperature being in the upper Mississippi and Missouri valleys and in Dakota, where the daily temperature ranged from four to eight degrees below the average for the week. The abnormally low temperature which occurred in this section was attended by frosts from Michigan and Ohio westward to Nebraska. The week was warmer than usual in New England and the middle Atlantic states, but about the normal temperature prevailed throughout the Southern states.

The season, from January 1 to September 21, has been cool from the lake region southward to the gulf and South Atlantic coast, and warm in New England, Eastern New York in the Missouri valley, Dakota and Minnesota.

On the Pacific coast the average daily temperature for the season has been about 2 deg. above the normal, and this condition applies to the coast from San Diego to Portland.

PRECIPITATION.

There has been more than the usual amount of rain during the week in New England, the Middle Atlantic states, the lower lake region, the Ohio valley, Tennessee, the northern portion of the east Gulf states, and in portions of Texas, Minnesota, Iowa, Dakota, Nebraska, Missouri and Kansas. Very light showers occurred in the southern portion of the South Atlantic and East Gulf states, in the Upper Mississippi valley, and the southern portion of the upper lake region.

The rainfall for the season continues in excess from New York southward to Florida, and from the Texas coast northward to the Missouri valley. Generally over 80 per cent. of the nominal rainfall occurred over the remaining portions of the Southern states, except in Eastern Kentucky, which received from 65 to 70 per cent. of the normal. Throughout the principal corn-producing states, from Indiana westward to Nebraska and Kansas, over 80 per cent. of the normal occurred, except in Iowa, over the greater portion of which state about 75 per cent. of the seasonal rainfall is reported. South-East Michigan and the western portion of Ohio received about ten inches less rain than usual during the present season, while over the greater portions of Minnesota and Northern Dakota the deficiency in rainfall for the season ranges from six to eight inches. In Oregon and Washington territory the deficiency in rainfall ranges from ten to fifteen inches, or about one-half the usual amount of rain occurred in this section, while in California the seasonal rainfall amounted to a little more than 75 per cent. of the normal.

GENERAL REMARKS.

Reports from the Northwest and states of the Ohio valley indicate that an excellent corn crop has been secured, and that only slight damage has resulted to the crop in that section from recent frosts. In the winter-wheat states the ground is generally in good condition, and seeding is progressing rapidly. Young wheat is well advanced in Kansas, where the weather was favorable, except in the extreme northwestern portion of the state.

In Kentucky and Tennessee the tobacco crop was improved, but slight damage resulted from light frost on Wednesday and Thursday, of which timely warning was given by this service. About one-half the tobacco crop is cut in Kentucky. In Pennsylvania a portion of the tobacco crop remains uncut, the weather being too wet for curing.

The weather during the week in the cotton regions was generally favorable except in Tennessee, where rain caused some damage, and in Alabama, where drought and rust proved injurious to the plant, which is reported as opening rapidly. The weather was generally favorable for picking, but in Texas the cool weather retarded the opening of the bolls. In Arkansas leaf and boll worms injured many fields, and in Mississippi the second appearance of worms has proved very destructive in several localities. In the east portion of the cotton region the weather was favorable, and plants are encouraged. Rice is being harvested in Louisiana, but rain would improve the cane crop, the present crop conditions in this state being reported very good. In New Jersey the weather was decidedly unfavorable, and all growing crops were injured by the daily rains in this state. In New York the weather was favorable for the corn harvest, and winter wheat is reported as good and pastures fair. In New England wet and cloudy weather proved injurious to corn in shock and caused the sprouting of oats and buckwheat. The fruit crop was also injured, and apples are dropping badly.

CROP-WEATHER BULLETIN 30.

A Weekly Review of the Prevailing Conditions in Oregon.

The following crop-weather bulletin is compiled from reports received by the Oregon State Weather Bureau, co-operating with the United States Signal Service, for the week ending Saturday, September 28:

The temperature for the week has been about normal. On Wednesday it arose to 80 degrees or above in many sections of the state, but since then there has been a decided fall.

Last Saturday night, Sunday and Monday general showers were experienced, being quite heavy in the northern part of the Willamette valley and along the northern part of the coast. At the mouth of the Columbia river over an inch fell. The weather conditions Friday and yesterday were favorable for rain, but so far only light sprinkles have occurred. The rain, in the fore part of the week again cleared the atmosphere of the dense smoke, but by the end of the week it was quite smoky again, showing that extensive forest fires yet prevail in sections of the state. In Curry county the most destructive forest fires known since the settlement of the country have prevailed, large bodies of fine timber, grass and stock ranges have been destroyed—not only these have been burnt but also sawmills, barns, haystacks, fences, and in one instance a house was burnt, the occupants barely escaping with their lives. The amount of sunshine has been about normal.

Foggy mornings have generally prevailed in the western portion of the state. Frost occurred in the higher plateau of eastern Oregon during the week, but no damage was done or is reported.

Since the cool weather set in, many of the springs and wells of eastern Oregon appear to have become stronger.

In Jordan valley, Malheur county, baled hay is selling at $12 50 and $15 per ton on the ranch and grain 2½ cents per pound. In Cook county it is reported that wheat is selling at $2 50 per bushel.

In the Willamette valley the showers of the fore part of the week were very valuable. In places the wheat lately sown has already appeared above the ground. There has been quite a large amount already sown and the weather conditions have been favorable to it.

In the Umpqua valley fruit drying is nearly at an end and large shipments of dried fruit of all kinds, especially prunes, will be made.

In the Rogue river valley grape picking for wine continues. The yield of white grapes around Jacksonville has been very good. Grass valley, Wasco county, frosts are of almost nightly occurrence. Potatoes are very scarce, the crop being an entire failure. This has been a disastrous year on the farmers of this section, and some are moving away to try to better their condition. In Sherman county fall grain is being sown. A larger acreage than ever before will be put in in the county. The increased acreage will be about 30 per cent. The rain of the 21st and 22d was quite general throughout Eastern Oregon, but hardly sufficient fell to be of any real benefit. The wheat market yet remains inactive, but a small amount of wheat is moving. The warehouses in the interior are generally filled to their full capacity.

ABOUT OUR "KING PIN" HOTEL.

What an Exchange Says of The Portland—Mine Host Leland.

The following in regard to our new hotel is from the Sunday Press, of Albany, N. Y.:

The magnificent "king pin" hotel of the West, The Portland, is now approaching completion at Portland, Or., and Mr. Charles E. Leland, late of the Delavan house in this city, will be the manager.

Mr. Leland began hotel life in the world-renowned Metropolitan, New York, in 1857, when his uncles were the proprietors. In 1866 he leased the Clarendon hotel, Saratoga, and in 1872 he purchased that property. During the fifteen years he presided over the Clarendon hotel he made it the summer home of the best people in the land, and among his guests were the Vanderbilts, Lorillards, Masons, Carrols, Rhinelanders, Hammersleys, Marshalls, the great lawyer Charles O'Conor, Roscoe Conkling, Bishop (now Cardinal) Gibbons, ex-President Frank Pierce, the great philanthropist Gerrit Smith, and all of the most prominent men of the country. During his Clarendon hotel experience he was proprietor of the famous Delavan house, also the proprietor of the new Rossmore hotel, New York. He was thus sole proprietor of three large, first-class hotels at one time. In 1883 he leased the mammoth Hotel Brighton, Coney Island, and has since 1885, been proprietor of the Leland hotel, Harrisburg, Pa. He will now conduct one of the largest, most complete, best appointed and most sumptuous hotels in the world.

The ground plan of The Portland is like the letter H, and all rooms facing the large open court have bay windows and are front rooms. The hotel is 200 feet in length on each of its three court fronts, making a court frontage of 600 feet exclusive of its outer frontage; it is seven stories in hight and will accommodate 600 guests.

Mr. Charles E. Leland is one of the most experienced and popular hotel proprietors in America. He has great capacity for detail, and will conduct The Portland with princely elegance, while his genial, whole-souled hospitality will endear him to patrons.

STATE GOVERNMENT.

An Analysis of the Yearly Cost in Washington.

The Expenditures as Fixed by the Constitution To Be Voted Upon by the People of the New State To-Morrow.

The following circular by C. R. Dorr has been published throughout Washington territory. It is well worth examination by those who are attacking the constitution on the allegation that it will establish an expensive state government:

False and garbled statements of the annual cost of state government under the constitution have been issued and circulated by irresponsible persons, with a view to inflame the minds of the people against that instrument, that it may be defeated at the polls next Tuesday.

The following is an accurate statement of what the state government will cost annually under the constitution, the estimates for all expenditures other than salaries being taken from the last report of the territorial auditor to the legislative assembly, pages 21 to 24, inclusive to-wit:

Governor	$ 4,000
Lieutenant governor	1,000
Secretary of state	2,500
Auditor	2,000
Superintendent public instruction	2,500
Treasurer	2,000
Attorney general	2,000
Land commissioner—no salary fixed	1,600
Five supreme judges	20,000
Twelve superior judges, at $1500	18,000
Legislature, 105 members at $5 per day, 60 days, $31,500, every 2 years; annual cost	15,750
Mileage for legislature $3000; annually	1,500
Hospital for insane, general expense	25,000
Hospital for insane, improvements and extra incidentals	7,500
Transportation for insane	10,500
Territorial convicts, care and maintenance	25,000
Transportation of convicts to penitentiary	7,500
Prosecuting attorneys' salaries	9,500
Librarian and library	500
Board of education	500
Territorial University	5,000
School for defective youth	3,750
Printing and advertising	8,000
Legislative expense, one session, $5000; annual expense	2,500
Extradition expense	1,000
Miscellaneous salaries and expenses, like supreme court reporter, clerk, supreme court, etc	2,500
Miscellaneous appropriations	6,000
Total	$190,000

The remaining $1000 of the superior judge salaries is paid by the county for which he is elected in proportion to their taxable wealth. This proportion for Garfield, Columbia and Asotin is as follows: Columbia, $537; Garfield, $463; Asotin, $370, as shown by last assessment. Under the old system, the same counties pay for probate judges as follows: Columbia, $800; Garfield, $500; Asotin, $500; and for grand jurors in 1888, Columbia, $923; Garfield, $517; Asotin, $500; making a total cost to each county of $1723 to Columbia, $1317 to Garfield, $850 to Asotin, or a cost to the district of $3947. The new judiciary system will only cost the same district $1500—a saving to the counties of $2446. All other districts will be approximately in the same proportion.

The above amount, $190,000, is all it will be necessary to raise by taxation to support state government under the constitution. The tax necessary to sustain territorial government in its present form is fixed by statutes at 2½ mills on every dollar's worth of property in the territory. In 1888 the taxable wealth of Washington was $85,000,000 (see Sec. Owings statistical report, page 6). In 1889 it will amount to $100,000,000; in 1890 to $125,000,000.

At the same rate of taxation as under territorial government the taxable wealth of 1888 would raise $212,500, which is $22,500 more than is required to run the state under the constitution.

In 1889 at the same rate, $250,000 would be raised —$60,000 more than necessary. In 1890, $312,000 would be raised, etc.

The property valuation of 1890 will be the valuation upon which the first state tax will be levied. If it amounts to $125,000,000, and who can doubt it, a tax of 1½ mills will raise the amount required, or one mill less than you now pay into the territorial treasury. Even at two mills on the dollar state government will be cheaper in taxes than territorial.

Elect honest men to the legislature who will see to it that only such a rate of taxation is fixed as actually necessary to support state government, as above.

As long as we remain a territory the magnificent grant of school lands made in the enabling act are valueless to us, but once a state, a few short years will raise from them a fund, the income from which will support our common schools, thus relieving tax-payers from an annual tax of from 5 to 10 mills on the dollar.

Other magnificent grants are made in the enabling act for state purposes. As long as we remain a territory they are valueless. The territory is fast settling up, and if we remain a territory much longer we will be compelled to select our lands from refuse lands of the territory.

Think of all these things before you cast your ballot against the constitution.

The following analysis, showing one year's expenses of the state government under the constitution is also published:

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

Governor	$ 4,000
Lieutenant Governor	1,000
Secretary	2,500
Treasurer	2,000
School Superintendent	2,500
Auditor	2,000
Attorney General	2,000
Total	$16,000

JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT.

Five Supreme Judges	$20,000
Twelve Superior Judges	18,000
Total	$38,000

One supreme court clerk and one supreme court reporter—salaries to be fixed by law. The fees paid to the state by litigants will more than pay these officers and still make a saving to litigants.

Half the salaries of the superior judges must be paid by the counties in which they hold courts.

The salaries of clerks and commissioners are to be fixed by law. The fees paid into court by litigants will about pay the half-salaries of the judges, clerks and commissioners, running behind about the amount to be paid in criminal business. A great saving will be made in jury expenses and in the board and keep of prisoners in county jails.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

70 members, at $5 per day	$350
35 senators, at $5 per day	75
10 doorkeepers, clerks, etc	50
Total per day	$475
For 60 days' session	$34,500
For contingent expenses	1,500
Total	$36,000

After the first year this expense will be for a two years' term, or $18,000 per annum.

The munificent grant by the general government of public lands for school purposes will, in a short time, raise a sufficient revenue to relieve the people of all taxation for the support of common schools. No grant of lands to the state is available until the constitution is adopted.

Thirty-four probate judges abolished by the constitution and twelve superior court judges substituted.

This essay caused considerable discussion and was branched by Rev. C. C. Poling, E. S. Bollinger, J. B. Fisher, H. L. Pratt and J. L. Hirshner, who portrayed in well selected illustrations the "Lights and Shadows of an Itinerant Minister."

An able and interesting paper was presented by Rev. J. L. Hirshner "On the Parable of the Tares" and its "Rigid Enforcement with Church Discipline."

The question box brought before the convention a great many important questions, which were discussed with interest and profit.

The reports of committee on programme and treasurer were read and accepted, and all bills were ordered paid.

On motion it was decided that the next ministerial convention shall be held at Corvallis, to begin on the second Monday of September, 1890. It was also agreed that all the pastors of the Evangelical church of Corvallis, Albany and Independence be appointed as a committee.

The ministerial convention was brought to a close by parting remarks and prayer by Rev. C. C. Poling.

Great interest has been taken in these sessions, and the attendance has been quite large. The body of ministers presented a fine appearance, and were nearly all eloquent speakers as well as fine singers.

Dividends From Borrowed Money.

Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

Henry Villard's fantastic scheme of devoting a part of the proceeds of the proposed Northern Pacific blanket mortgage to the payment of dividends if net earnings failed to suffice, as of course they would, has been ridiculed and criticised out of court, and the funding plan regularly adopted by the directors now stands alone. The idea of selling bonds to or borrowing money from stockholders with which to pay dividends to stockholders proved to be a little too bold even for these fast and loose days in railroading. The projector of the blind pool is proving very like his old self. Next time look out for something more weird and dazzling.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla, sending the brain pure blood, makes sound both mind and body.

Mrs. Youngbride—"Yes, it is to be our fifth anniversary, our wooden wedding, and, Charles, I want you to be sure to come." Mrs. Oldboy—"Then, I suppose, Mr. Oldboy will have to look after some sort of wooden things as gifts for the occasion." Mrs. Youngbride—"No, indeed. If you only drop in and show your faces that will be enough."—America.

PORTLAND, MONDAY SEPT 30

WASHINGTON'S CONSTITUTION

Some opposition to the constitution of Washington has been developed during the last two or three weeks, but it seems to be local or merely in spots. From all appearances the constitution will be adopted by a large majority. In particular localities there may be a considerable vote against it, but after somewhat diligent inquiry we hear of no general opposition. Such objections to it as have been presented are inspired largely by partisan spirit working upon the supposed fears of the people that the constitution will establish an expensive government for the state. This has been the method of Voorhees and others in their attacks upon the constitution, and if they could postpone still further and for an indefinite period the admission of a state which they cannot expect their party to win and hold, their purpose would be quite fulfilled.

The salaries proposed by the constitution are but fair and moderate compensation for the services required. They are entirely within the range of those paid by our prosperous and progressive states, and men who are fit to serve the state in its several departments cannot be expected to accept office for smaller pay. Beggarly salaries shut out all but the rich from public service or invite a class of men who are worthless to the state. Washington has grown so rapidly in taxable wealth that her state government will not be felt at all. Her valuation last year was $85,000,000, this year it will exceed $100,000,000, and five years hence it will be $200,000,000. Less than a two mill tax will soon pay every dollar of the expense of her state government under the constitution. The state tax will be no more than the territorial tax is now, and as the taxable property of the state continues to increase it will be less. As consequences of the change, the people will be able to control and administer their home affairs, to take care of their valuable endowments of state lands, to develop their school fund and make their educational system wholly self supporting, they will be admitted to participation in national affairs and will obtain a representation in congress that will support their local interests, in a word they will become citizens both of a state and of the United States.

To the paltry and demagogical plea that the constitution should be rejected because it proposes to pay the officials of the state more than the average laborer or farmer can make, there needs no answer. It is a plea too pitiful for serious reply. It belongs to a grade of argument for which all intelligent men should express proper contempt. Every office in the state will be open to the farmer or laborer qualified to fill it the same as to other persons, and it may be assumed that no farmer or laborer elected to a state office will deem the salary too large for the service and responsibility required. A state owes it to itself that its officials shall be decently paid, and when a man like Mr Charles Voorhees who has accepted $5000 a year and mileage for his service in congress and evidently thought his services worth the money, tells the people of Washington that $4000 is too much to pay their governor and too much to pay the justices of their supreme court, they may be permitted to question the sincerity and validity of the argument, and to conclude that they who present it are merely playing a part.

The people of Washington have long desired to assume the duties and rights of statehood. The constitution before them is good enough for any state and as good as they may ever expect to have, and there seems to be no reason to doubt that they will adopt it by a large majority. And at the same time they will pretty certainly intrust to the republican party the administration of the affairs of the new state.

THE ARISTOCRACY OF SKIN

Frederick Douglass our minister to Hayti, finding that he could not get first class accommodations on a steamboat or train going South because his skin was black, appealed to the government saying that he could not afford to go second class because the fact would be caught up by the press and heralded to Hayti and that he would not be received at his post of duty with the same respect that he would if he were treated respectfully in his own country. The government then ordered the United States steamer Despatch to convey Douglass to Norfolk and the Ossipee to transport him to Hayti. Commander Kellogg of the Ossipee however, refused to eat at the same table with Douglass, because the latter was a negro and Douglass very properly refused to be treated in any other way upon a United States vessel than would a white diplomat. The action of Commander Kellogg is a fresh illustration of the rule of the aristocracy of skin in America, the meanest, most ignorant and low bred aristocracy known to the civilized world. Mr Douglass is a fine looking mulatto; his father was a United States senator. As Douglass once informed a snobbish fellow who boasted that he, the son of a United States senator, was not ashamed to take a negro by the hand, Douglass was a slave who escaped to New Bedford where he worked as a stevedore under the protection of the Quakers. He acquired an excellent education by his own efforts, rose to great fame as an orator, became the editor of an able newspaper at Rochester, N. Y., acquired a handsome property, visited England, where he was tendered not only all the public hospitality extended to other eminent Americans, but was invited to dinner by English gentlemen of the highest rank and culture, men who would not think of opening their doors to an obscure navy snob like Commander Kellogg. Mr Douglass has been United States marshal and register of deeds of the District of Columbia, presidential elector and has dined with more than one president of the United States. He has enjoyed the friendship and private hospitality of Lincoln, Seward, Sumner, Wendell Phillips, Horace Greeley, Gov Andrew, Roscoe Conkling and other eminent American statesmen. He is a polished gentleman in his manners, his conversational powers are remarkable, he is a man of wit and humor and he has led a decent and upright life. Measured by every standard that determines a man, he is the superior of Commander Kellogg and the equal of any officer in the American navy. He can write and speak the English language as well as any college-bred man in this country, and a great deal better than the majority of the children of colleges; he is one of the first orators in America; he is as much of a self made man as Lincoln, he has surmounted more difficulties and has displayed more versatile ability than Garfield, and nothing can be said in excuse of the gross indignity put upon him by Commander Kellogg, save that there is negro blood in his veins. Measured by all moral, physical, intellectual, spiritual and educational tests, Douglass is an American gentleman, and the commander of a United States vessel refuses to treat the United States minister to Hayti as a gentleman, because he is a negro who has proved himself a man. The register of the treasury before Rosecrans was a negro, one of the auditors of the treasury is a negro, three negroes have sat in the United States senate and a negro is to-day a member of congress. Mr Douglass has always been received at the White house with the same social honors that would have been his had he been a United States senator. President Grant sent Douglass to San Domingo as member of a commission which included United States Senator Wade and Dr Howe, the husband of Julia Ward Howe. These eminent gentlemen ate at the same table with Douglass during the whole trip and treated him under all circumstances not only as a colleague, but as an intimate friend. And yet Frederick Douglass who has dined at the tables of the highest rank and culture of Europe, who has been the personal, familiar friend of many of the most distinguished men of this generation is not fit as a government diplomat, to eat at the same table with the nincompoop captain of a government vessel! Such conduct would be impossible on the part of a British naval officer, for it would cost him his commission to treat a government officer of such rank with insult. There is no aristocracy of skin in Europe. Alexander Dumas, the great novelist, the pet of Paris, the politest city in the world, was as much of a negro in blood and in features as Douglass, as anybody can see by looking at Dumas's picture in Scribner's for September. In Europe well bred people would no more think of refusing to eat at the same table with a gentleman because of the color of his skin than they would refuse to read Othello on the plea that its leading character was a negro hero, created by Shakespeare. The English are a manlier people than we are in this respect. They fix a standard of manners, education and morals that are indispensable to social consideration, but when a man satisfies the standard they do not ask any questions concerning his color or any other "act of God."

THE INCESSANT FEVER OF POLITICS

Political fever, formerly of an intermittent type, has of late years developed into an incessant glow that increases somewhat during each fourth year, but never entirely abates in the interim. It is one of the penalties that attach to political competition and is of an epidemic type, so that, while it may rage with more violence in one part of the country than another at times, no section is exempt from at least a periodical outbreak.

Just at present the territories of the Northwest that are soon to be made states are contending with it and the doses in the way of political oratory that are being administered on all sides have a most confusing effect upon the people, who are playing the role of patients.

Over in Washington the air is vocal with reasons why the constitution recently framed should or should not be adopted, why prohibition should or should not be incorporated in that instrument, why the women of the new state should or should not vote and where the capital should or should not be located. But the fever, or the delirium that is characteristic of it as a crisis approaches, does not reach its height until the question of who is to fill the offices is reached.

Who is to be the first governor of the state of Washington? Clearly the citizens will be able to do no better for themselves in making this choice than the appointing power at Washington has done for them before, since both candidates have filled the office of territorial governor acceptably and honorably. However this fact does not abate the fever of the contest a whit but increases it rather, as the choice will decide the political status of the new state. Probability strives to hold the fever in check, as it is reasonably certain that if a full vote is thrown Washington will be republican.

Nevertheless the nervous office seeker is filled with forebodings and the community at large has found out so many disreputable things about some of its most prominent citizens that it gladly sets them down to the delirium of political fever and will charitably strive to forget them during the brief interval in which these ravings cease.

A lawyer, old enough to reason better, is reported to have said that while he was not in entire sympathy with the street shouting, singing and horn blowing of the Portland "Salvation Army," nevertheless he sustained them because he knew that the leader was a graduate of a New England college and the son of a Christian minister. In other words the graduate of a college cannot be a crank or criminal, or the child of a clergyman a knave. Bob Ingersoll, who is anti-Christ to this lawyer, is the son of an orthodox clergyman and is clothed with all the culture that a college can give. Professor Webster, hung for murder, was not only a college graduate but a distinguished member of Harvard's medical faculty. Stephen Burroughs, the famous New England robber, forger and confidence man, was a clergyman's son who stole his father's sermons and preached them. Aaron Burr was a child of Princeton college and his mother was the daughter of Jonathan Edwards. John H Noyes, the founder of the Oneida community, where free love was practiced under the form of stirpiculture, was a graduate of Dartmouth college and of Andover and was a New England orthodox clergyman in good standing for several years before he became a crank. As a matter of fact, college graduates are not seldom guilty of folly and imposture, and the army of social, political and religious cranks is largely recruited from the ranks of clergymen and clergymen's sons. Hence the popular proverb concerning "ministers' sons and deacons' daughters."

Grants Pass, a very small town compared to Portland, sets her older and larger sister a very good example. In consideration of a franchise her water company agrees to lay mains and furnish water hydrants for fire purposes, on each street designated by the council. It also compels the company to keep a reservoir containing not less than 200,000 gallons constantly on hand and to furnish water with sufficient pressure to extinguish fire. We of course own our water works now, but the city council don't mind giving away other valuable franchises with privileges that, without exaggeration, are worth millions to private corporations. The people will know what such rights are worth some day in the near future when it will be too late for the knowledge to be of much avail.

Within the past few days county fairs have been held in various important sections of Oregon. The reports have been universally gratifying. Good weather has encouraged increased attendance. Farmers and exhibitors realizing the benefits derived from healthy competition have vied with each other in the laudable attempt to show in full and complete measure the varied resources of the 96,000 square miles within the borders of the state. The increased excellence of these annual fairs is one of the surest evidences of prosperity and substantial progress.

The question of erecting in Washington a monument to Lucy B Hayes is being considered. As a woman who without youth or beauty filled the high position to which she was unexpectedly called with dignity, grace and an unswerving devotion to the moral principles that had governed her life in obscurity Mrs Hayes is worthy of honor. Every woman who exalts true womanhood above the mere outward graces that attract and should be pleased to count it a privilege to contribute to a monument to perpetuate the memory of Mrs. Hayes.

A London cable to the New York Tribune says that Mr Abbott, an agent of the Canadian Pacific, has gone from London to Australia upon a mission which is regarded as one of a good deal of importance in connection with steamship trade across the Pacific ocean. "The primary object is to press the claims of Vancouver as against San Francisco as the terminus of the new line of Pacific steamers. [illegible] Canada has [illegible] from [illegible] £150,000 [illegible] between England and Canada and [illegible] prepared to give £[illegible] for the proposed [illegible] service between Vancouver and Sydney, New South Wales. Mr Abbott wishes to induce the Australians to contribute an additional [illegible] £[illegible],000 toward the Pacific subvention in order to secure fast boats capable of giving a twenty eight days' mail between London and Sydney. Behind all this is the Pacific cable project which Canada also strongly supports." We have here a striking example of the policy which gives commercial supremacy. England has followed it for years and has poured forth money without stint in support of it. She has her reward in the enormous foreign trade which dots the waters of the world with her shipping. She is still pursuing it. And Canada is imitating it. It is the policy the United States must adopt and pursue if we are to build up an ocean trade.

Students in the State Agricultural college were set to work on the college farm last Wednesday. There is one compulsory hour of labor for each student every day, for which 12½ cents are paid. If they are disposed to be industrious and wish to work a longer time they are paid 15 cents an hour. There is danger that in their eagerness to get rich off of the state these young men may impair their constitutions. The young women don caps, aprons and sleeve protectors of white and play at cooking each day in the commodious kitchen under proper tutelage, and as women are supposed to take naturally to that sort of thing, we suppose their health will not be impaired seriously.

A strong physical constitution and good health we generally hold to be necessary to success in life, but Darwin was always an invalid, and Sir Andrew Clark, the great English physician, the other day told his students that he was a sickly child, and that his life was not deemed worth a year's purchase, when he began the active work of his brilliantly successful career. Many other instances could be cited of eminent men of feeble and sickly youth who yet lived to complete a great and splendid career. The names of Admiral Nelson, Marshal Luxembourg, DeQuincey, William the Third of England, William Pitt, Pope, and many others might be cited.

The Oregon Mist says: "Prunes grow well in Columbia county and will bring more handsome returns than hay, potatoes or any other crop that can be produced. This county is fitted with natural advantages for fruit growing, an industry which is continually on the increase as this fact becomes impressed upon settlers. Every part of the county is within fair distance of market and there is no danger of over production, especially in prunes, as the demand for that product grows greater each year."

A tract of land in Los Angeles county, Cal., that sold two years ago for $16,000 was surrendered recently for the face of the $6000 mortgage that covered it. Moral: Trust not in boomers and never buy property that you have not seen. Non-residents who could have made reasonable gains by investing their money according to their own judgment near home are among the most conspicuous victims of the collapsed boom in Southern California.

In Virginia the principal democratic speakers were invited to meet the principal republican speakers in discussion, but refused. Some time afterwards republican local speakers retaliated by refusing to meet democratic local speakers. This statement will furnish an explanation that several democratic papers of the Northwest have seemed to require. Taking no notice of the first fact stated, they have tried to fasten misrepresentation on THE OREGONIAN by stating the last.

The patent commissioner, Mr C E Mitchell, has placed on file with the secretary of the interior a preliminary report of the operations of his bureau for the year ending June 30, 1889. During that period 36,740 applications for patents were received. The number granted, including reissues and designs, was 21,516. The receipts from all sources during the year aggregated $1,186,557; expenditures $[illegible]9,697, leaving as a surplus for the year $186,860.

A woman was sentenced to the penitentiary from Clatsop county last week for theft committed in a notorious "dive" in Astoria last June, her confederate in the crime being a man who first ruined and then consigned her to a life of infamy. She is quite young and the only one of her sex in that institution, hence her disposal and care while there will be a matter of some inconvenience to the authorities.

It is a very poor town in Oregon now that is not [illegible] save [illegible] additions. This, together with the fact that [illegible] of houses is reported from every town and city of the state, is an indication of growth and development unknown before in our history. The people are beginning to realize the fact that the riches at their very threshold would better be utilized before the stranger comes in and walks off with the prize.

A great amount of building is in progress at Salem and there is not a house to rent in the entire city. The artisans there will have ample work with which to occupy the entire winter. This is cheering intelligence in many ways. It insures a good business and a prosperous community for an entire year. It is reported that more operations would be commenced but for the lack of cement and other building material.

A democrat of thirty years' standing, Col [illegible] Lowe of [illegible] county, Virginia, says he will vote with the republicans. He explains that he has become exceedingly tired and disgusted with the democratic scarecrow of negro domination. "The negroes have no more idea of ruling this country than the democrats of Virginia have of ruling Rome. All that the negro asks is to be given a fair chance."

Ignorance, not intelligence, seems to be the chief qualification for jurors in the Cronin murder trial at Chicago. Thus far one juror has been secured each week, so that if nothing extraordinary occur the case will be fairly on its way by about Christmas. The policy of excluding reading and thinking men from the jury is an indication that justice will not be fully attained.

Whether Chicago or New York shall secure the great exhibition of 1892, those in control should study to make it reflect the world's highest thought and sentiment, the century's noblest music, the true international politics of the age. If this be done an impulse will be given our own nation that would speed the people on to nobler achievements in the vanguard of human progress.

Out of 1000 convicts in a Pennsylvania prison but nine were trained up for mechanical pursuits. A man with a trade is seldom tempted to commit crime through want, and parents are criminally negligent who do not compel their children to learn some useful handicraft by which they may always retain a complete independence.

Secretary Noble of the interior department, makes the following statement respecting his policy on the subject of pensions, and it is a very sensible policy: "My own pension policy may be very briefly summed up. I was a soldier. I made my way up from the ranks. I belong to the Grand Army. I want to see every union soldier get a pension which [illegible] and I want to see that the money is allowed [illegible] by the law. And I [illegible] to stay where I am every thing must be done according to the law, which is so [illegible] there is no necessity for mistaking it."

The New York World nominates Grover Cleveland to succeed Samuel S. Cox in congress. The [illegible] now says: "Nobody has seconded the motion to send Mr Cleveland to congress in place of the late Mr Cox, and Mr Cleveland himself has made no sign. So the matter may as well be dropped." Mr Cleveland could not possibly be induced to go to congress. In the intellectual contests of that body he would be a mere dummy, a cipher, and he knows that this fact would ruin his pretensions to greatness and beat him for the nomination to the presidency in 1892.

To-morrow is election day in Washington, and all the people of that territory that is not to be a territory much longer will be glad when the agony is over.

Marion county's valuation this year is $9,2[illegible]9,[illegible]40. The deduction for indebtedness is $2,[illegible]40,529. This is a much fairer valuation than that of last year.

PERSONAL AND GENERAL.

Professor Swing says that Browning possesses poetic power but that he lacks the facility of concrete expression. This is sufficiently vague to constitute a worthy explanation of the difficulties of Browning's poetry.

A London correspondent says that the cause of Mrs Rives Chanler's abandonment of literature lies in the fact that her success gave rise to a school of fiction which has produced a large number of female writers who have brought criticism into disrepute.

Bishop Fowler thinks that Prince Li, the viceroy of China, is "one of the greatest statesmen the world has ever produced." General Grant used to say that the two men who had impressed him most during his travels around the world were Prince Kung, formerly regent of the Celestial Empire, and Prince Bismarck.

Amanda Nelson Williams, who died recently at Indiantown, North Stonington, Conn., was the last of the Pequot race. She was 6[illegible] years of age. She was the daughter of old Thomas Nedson, [illegible] was educated with white children and was always self supporting. She was a member of the Baptist church and an earnest worker in the cause of religion.

George Russell, a close young friend of Gladstone, says that the latter is [illegible] in the [illegible] of home, and that he has no [illegible] for [illegible] conversation. He asks questions of those whom he wants information from and answers them copiously when asked by others. But as give and take, [illegible] telling you half way, and of meeting you back [illegible] in easy conversational [illegible] he has no [illegible].

A new literary venture called the National Magazine has been started in Chicago under the auspices of the new National University of which it is to be the organ. The first number will be issued in October. It will contain articles of literary, educational and scientific subjects, and a prospectus of the university, which is said to be modeled after the London university and has extensive non-resident courses of study in [illegible] subjects by mail.

Major John P Edwards of Atlanta, comes to the front at this late day to declare as false the often told story that Jeff Davis ran away with the daughter of General Taylor and married her against her father's will. Major Edwards says Jeff Davis and Miss Taylor were united in marriage [illegible] [illegible] and his daughter giving his blessing [illegible] asking that the ceremony be performed at his home [illegible] in Jefferson county, Ky.

True or not, there is a story growing out of the recent G. A. R. encampment which points a moral. It is said that General Sherman was greatly bothered one evening by the attentions of veterans of the professional pattern. He lost his temper finally at the chatter of one [illegible] who was garrulous about the good old times, of which there are mighty few of us left to tell the tale, and blurted out: "It's too bad there is a blank sight too many left who never marched with me through Georgia."

The relation of the yard to the meter is of more importance in our own mensuration than that of any other nation, as both are used here quite freely side by side, and the subject has justly claimed the topic of a careful preparation of authorities by Mr O. H. Tittmann of the United States coast and geodetic survey, which reaches the conclusion that the mean of measurements is 39.380 inches for the meter. This is shorter than the accepted English comparisons, which extend from Captain Kater's in 1818 of 39.3[illegible] to General C. B. Comstock's in 18[illegible] of 39.3[illegible].

PORTLAND AND VICINITY.

SPOILED THE EGGS.—The fish commission has been anxious to make a display of eggs in process of hatching, at the fair, since, a water pipe having been ..., Commissioner Reed brought a Dough jar and a few thousand eggs, the water running into the jar, and were moving around in great shape. On going to look at the eggs to see how they were getting along, Mr. Reed was astonished to find that they were all dead. Accidentally placing his hand on the water pipe, he was surprised to find that it was quite hot. Further investigation showed that the water from the boiler had been blown into the pipe and the eggs in the jar had been literally cooked. There were some three or four thousand eggs cooked at one fell swoop. Before another lot of eggs is put in there will be a change in the plumbing connected with it.

SPEAKING AT VANCOUVER TO-NIGHT.—There will be a grand rally of the republicans of Vancouver to-night, the great drawing card being the speaking by the Hon. Henry McGinn, one of the most brilliant and eloquent speakers of the coast. While Mr. McGinn will be the speaker of the evening, there will be other short addresses from prominent republicans of the territory. A special invitation is extended by the committee having to-night's demonstration in charge to the Irish-American citizens of the territory to be present. The meeting will be held at the Standard theater, one of the largest and most comfortable halls in Vancouver.

HE KNEW THE FORGER.—In a recent item referring to the arrest of the forger, J. H. Hoffman, it was stated that he sent one J. W. Reed on a "wild goose chase" to La Grande in search of ... Mr. Reed, in a letter to THE OREGONIAN, says that fortunately he was not one of the victims. He says, however, that he knows of several other persons who were fooled in this way, and he characterizes the forger as one of the worst deadbeats ever caught in Portland.

HE WAS MADE HAPPY.—Mr. A. J. Brownlie, of Major Handbury's office, inspector of light-house construction for this district, was made happy Saturday by the addition of a little girl to his family. The attaches of the office drank a bumper to the health of the wee lassie in sparkling champagne.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT.—Judge Deady will announce a decision in this court this morning in the case of Home vs. The Oregon & Washington Mortgage and Savings bank on the demurrer to the complaint.

CAN'T BE UNDERSOLD.—Kohn claims that he does the best merchant tailoring in town, guarantees a good stand, gives good work at popular prices. Corner Second and Morrison.

A WATCH FOUND.—A ladies' gold watch and chain was found in Cordray's Museé-Theater. Owner can have the same by calling at the theatre.

GONE TO OMAHA.—Fine business suits $30 to $40 and guaranteed, by Arthur Kohn, corner Second and Morrison streets.

EVERYBODY should attend the grand republican demonstration to-night, at the Standard theater, Vancouver.

GOSSAMERS for 25 cents; 600 of them are offered by J. Selling & Co. They are not all guaranteed [illegible]

BEST HATS AT KOHN'S and lowest prices, at corner Second and Morrison streets.

AT THE THEATERS.

"Little Lord Fauntleroy" at the New Park—"The Convict's Daughter" at the Museé-Theater To-Night.

The Eastern company, under the direction of Mr. E. Hayman, which made the longest jump on record—from New York to Seattle—arrived in the city yesterday afternoon from the Sound, and will make its first appearance at the New Park theater to-night in that latest success, Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett's delightful play, "Little Lord Fauntleroy."

The company is said to be an exceptionally good one, all of them being people of experience, and the two children, Wallie Eddinger and Flossie Ethel, who alternate the little lord, being wonderfully clever.

Carl Hasswin, who plays the old Earl, is a sterling actor of the old school, and was identified for several seasons with "The Silver King," which role he played 900 times. "Michael Strogoff" has been played by him over 400 times. This is his second season in the role of the Earl, and his delineation is said to be the perfection of acting. Mr. Haswin traveled the Montana circuit with a company in stages more than twelve years ago, and dedicated the opera house at Helena when it was first opened.

Mr. Russell Bassett, who plays the role of Hobbs, the grocer, is a comedian of fine talent. He was the first manager to bring Lawrence Barrett to Portland, ten years ago, and he created the comedy role of Lazarus in "The Black Flag."

Charles Klein, who appears as Dick, the bootblack, is said to be a rising low comedian, and Lawrence Eddinger, who does Higgins, is an actor of experience.

James O. Peakes, as Havisham, the solicitor, will do full justice to the part. He is known throughout the country for his long experience in operatic circles and is a capable and painstaking actor.

Miss Minnie Radcliffe, who plays Dearest, was for a long time in the stock company of the Boston theater, and has also been identified with Augustin Daly's road companies. Last season she played the leading role in "Siberia." Miss Emma Marble, an old favorite on the coast, comes of an old theatrical family, being a niece of the distinguished actor, William Warren, and a cousin of Joe Jefferson.

Miss Dorothy Rossmore is a fine-looking woman, said to be especially clever in roles of the adventuress type. She ought to make an effective Minna. Altogether the cast seems an exceptionally strong one, and a fine performance should be the outcome. The advance sale is unusually large.

CORDRAY'S MUSEE-THEATER.

To-night opens the fall and winter season at this popular place of amusement, when will be presented the sterling melodrama, "The Convict's Daughter," with Miss Clyde Harron in the leading role of Clarisse Rochelle, supported by a company of competent people.

The play, which is said to be of the same general tenor as "The Celebrated Case," will be put on with all the accessories of new scenery and handsome costumes, and ought to be in for a successful run.

The musee besides its usual attractions, will have Courtright's comedy company in their amusing specialties.

A feature of the opening to-night will be the distribution to every lady in the audience of a handsome satin souvenir programme, embellished with a cut of Miss Clyde Harron.

THE NAME "IDAHO."

Joaquin Miller's Statement Properly Ridiculed.

Boise Statesman.

An inquirer after knowledge in "American Notes and Queries" for September 21, asks the old conundrum: "What is the meaning of the word 'Idaho'?" and receives the answer which has gone the rounds from age: "Joaquin Miller, who gave the incipient state of Idaho its name, says that it is written and spelled improperly. The correct form is Idahho, with the accent on the middle syllable. The name means the light on the mountains."

There is not, nor never was, a shadow of foundation for the statement. The word "Idaho" was perfectly familiar to thousands of white miners, traders and travelers of every class long before Miller ever saw the country. The writer of this paragraph was on the ground while a steamboat was being built by the Oregon Steam Navigation Company at a point above the Cascades of the Columbia river in the spring of 1860. He saw the steamer launched and christened "Idaho," and watched the workman while he painted this name in an appropriate place on the vessel.

The name is universally admired, and to the inquiry that was daily made as to its origin and meaning, the answer always was that it was a word that had been taken from some one of the Indian dialects at that time spoken by some of the tribes of Indians inhabiting that section of the Columbia river country, and that the meaning of the word, as given by the Indians and rendered into English by the interpreters of that day, was simply "gem of the mountains." The word was spoken and written by everybody having occasion to mention anything connected with the steamer just as it is spoken and written to-day. The account given by Miller of his talk with Colonel Craig and of their joint observations in the Nez Perce country during the autumn of 1861 is doubtless a pure myth—the afterwork of the poet's brain.

When in March, 1863, the question of the creation and organization of a new territory was before congress, the matter of finding a name for it was discussed, when the delegate in congress from Washington territory, Selucius Garfield, suggested the name of the old steamer as the most beautiful, appropriate and suggestive for the new territory. Miller had no more agency in finding a name for the region in question than he had in naming the thirteen original colonies. There surely must be a few of the old ones left who helped to build and name the old steamer. They can not be all dead, since only the good die young. If any of them are yet above ground let them come forward and tell the world how Colonel Ruckle, of the Oregon Steam Navigation Company, happened to find this beautiful name for his steamer, and who the interpreter was who gave him its meaning.

A HEROIC WOMAN.

Touching Account of the Sad End of Mrs. Kitchen.

Walla Walla Union.

Mrs. Belle Kitchen, wife of Wm. Kitchen, was buried on Friday afternoon in the city cemetery, her grave being surrounded by sorrowing relatives and friends. This is a sad ending of a young and promising life. Mrs. Kitchen, at the time of her death from a horrible accident, was but 27 years old, a loved wife and the idolized mother of four little children. She could boast that her every acquaintance was a warm friend, drawn to her by her sweetness of disposition—the true womanliness of her nature. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Nelson, who bore her that love that only parents can bear for their children, and on whom the blow has fallen with crushing might. The accident of which she was the victim has been detailed, but the heroism with which this frail woman bore her intense agony can never be told. Though her poor body was in torture, her high spirit mounted above her surroundings, and so long as she retained consciousness she wore a smile, and to anxious inquiries would always answer, "I am all right." When the doctor had been summoned and had dressed her fearful burns, he announced that she would have to be taken to Walla Walla for closer care, she acquiesced, and calling her four little ones to her, told them to be good children, while "mamma was gone; which would not be more than six weeks." No eulogy could fitly do justice to this woman's heroism, burned till recovery was hopeless, blessed with family ties so dear, and knowing what her fate must be, still repressing the natural instinct to cry out for sympathy, for relief, for hope; choking down the manifestation of her agony, so that loved ones might not be disturbed by a knowledge of her suffering and leaving the world, so bright to her, with a smile upon her lips.

The Farmers of To-day.

Montpelier Argus.

A deal of talk about farming not paying as well now as it did years ago is bosh. If farmers will consent to live as their predecessors did fifty years ago, as much or more money can be laid up now as then; but if money-getting is their chief or only object, farmers cannot go visiting several days in a month, spend two or three days in a week at the village, with the incidental expenses for tobacco and other things, as so many do now. It is an undisputed fact, too, that farmers are not now willing to live as did those who preceded them, and we do not blame them, the homes of the farmers of those days being devoid of many of the comforts and adornments in those of today.

Unequal Distribution of Wealth.

Binghamton (N. Y.) Republican.

"Old Hutch," the Chicago wheat king, was held up by highwaymen a few days ago, who went through his pockets and did not find a cent. But a highwayman who waylaid a laborer in New York Central park was rewarded by a haul of 13 cents. Thus constant evidences of the inequality in the distribution of wealth are constantly brought to light.

Take the Oregon Short Line for the East; twenty-one hours shorter than any other transcontinental line. Elegant new dining cars, Pullman palace sleepers, free family sleeping cars run through to Denver, Omaha, Council Bluffs and Kansas City; Union ticket office, 81 First street, corner Oak.

A FINE EXHIBIT OF PAINTINGS.

The Master Works of Eminent Artists Now on Exhibition in This City.

The collection of paintings, water colors and etchings, now on exhibition in Masonic hall, has been brought to this city by Mr. William Morris of San Francisco. It was opened for the first time yesterday and attracted quite a number of visitors. It will remain on exhibition during the coming week.

Among the artists represented is Hugo Fischer, a Bohemian painter in water colors, of whom several admirable examples are shown. Among these "A Winter Night in the Forest" is of great merit. The luminous quality of the moonlit sky, the excellent drawing of the trees, and a certain poetic sentiment pervading the entire picture, combine to produce an exceedingly pleasing effect. Another picture by the same artist, "Indian Summer on Lake Superior," displays the same qualities.

"On a Lee Shore" and "Summer Moon" are two oil paintings by that most eminent of marine artists, M. F. H. DeHaas. They are valued at $1500 and $1000, respectively, and in the story they each have to tell, represent the two sides of old ocean's life. The placid beauty of the summer sea, across which the rising moon throws a golden pathway, and the surf-beaten bar on which a brig, careening under the furious onslaught of the waves, is barely holding her own with the aid of her anchors, form a striking contrast to each other.

Benoni Irwin's "Grandmother's Task" occupied a place of honor at the recent Cincinnati exposition, and shows conscientious work as well as a pleasing sentiment.

Professor Ebel, of Munich, has a "Wood Scene" in the collection, which is distinguished by a fine aereal perspective.

A particularly charming picture is "The Essence of Summer," which represents a little German maiden snugly seated in the grass with her dolls. Butterflies float around her and the sunlight plays through the flower sprinkled mead.

Edward Moran's "Round the Light Ship" is an episode in the ocean race between the Genesta and Puritan, and is painted with all that well-known artist's power and skill.

"Evening on Long Island Sound" is a delicious bit of water color work by Louis K. Harlow.

A landscape by W. C. Baker has great strength and depth of tone, and is especially admired by artists.

There is a fine example by Vondalr Klezynsky, an eminent Russian painter. Horses attached to troitska have taken fright and are struggling to break away from their driver. The scene is full of action, and the winter atmosphere is exceedingly well represented.

W. C. Chaffely, whose exhibition of water colors in Baltimore recently attracted so much attention, is represented by a twilight effect. There are some seventy paintings in all, only a few of which we have attempted to characterize. The etchings are in part displayed upon the walls and in part contained in portfolios. They represent the great masters in this art.

"Day Is Ended," is a new proof after Jules Breton. "The Gates of Venice," by Moran, is a masterpiece. "Hamlet of Finasterre," by Breton, is the only parchment proof of this famous etching now procurable in this country.

"Fennison," after L'Lermite, an artist who has two pictures in the Luxembourg, is a remarkable production and one of the finest specimens of the art ever brought to America.

Other notable examples are by Burns, Chapman, Otis, Webber, etc. It will be seen that this is a collection of unusual merit, which cannot fail to be of interest to the art-loving public of Portland.

A GOVERNMENT WITHOUT BUSINESS HONOR.

A very interesting article in the October Atlantic is devoted to presentation of historical proof that "the government of the United States had been in operation for sixty-five years and the constitution was sixty-seven years old before a private person, citizen or alien, was permitted to demand justice of the republic." Despite the fact that the nation was founded on the idea that the law is supreme; that the rich and poor stand on equal footing in the courts of justice; that in our first days of national life, in the Colonial congress, the confederation, and in the states, the civil chiefs were lawyers, save Franklin, Washington and Robert Morris, despite this fact—so far as our own obligations are concerned, the author of this article, Henry L. Nelson, presents impregnable proof that "ours has been the most lawless government in the civilized world." It has persistently refused to pay its honest debts; it denied not seldom a hearing to claimants, until 1854, when congress enacted a law establishing the court of claims. Up to this time congress was the only tribunal with jurisdiction for the demands of individuals against the treasury, and even to-day we are so far behind other civilized nations in our methods for the collection of claims against the government, that an eminent authority has recently said that "the United States holds itself, of nearly all governments, the least amenable to law." Up to 1854 there was no judicial tribunal for trial of debt between an individual and the government. In Germany, long before this time, either a citizen or a foreigner could sue, recover judgment and levy an execution against the government. Execution ran also against the governments of Hanover and Bavaria. A writ of replevin could be issued against the English king, but the United States alone could not be compelled to pay its debts, and still refuses to permit the forcible collection of a judgment.

In 1848 the committee on claims reported to the house of representatives that of 17,537 private claims, which had been presented to congress within ten years, 8048 had never been acted upon, and but 910 had passed both houses. In other words, nearly 9000 persons had been denied justice and refused even a hearing, and of the 8589 who had been heard only 910 had prevailed. The result was that only the impecunious or the corrupt would consent to do business with so dishonest a debtor as the United States. Reputable merchants and honest contractors would have nothing to do with the government, and the United States was discredited at home and abroad. Out of this state of things grew a large and influential lobby of corrupt claim agents, who made accounts large enough to cover the cost of their collection. A citizen of the United States recovered a judgment against Spain for $373,880. It was suggested that our government should be substituted as the debtor. The creditor refused, rather than take the risk of the dishonest disposition of congress to dodge payment of all claims against the government. But in spite of the creditor's refusal the transfer was made, and congress to this day has never appropriated the money to pay the debt. To-day there is the same difficulty in collecting debts that depend upon congressional action. We quote:

> There has been a struggle between politicians of a certain low order to win a reputation for economy. In order to accomplish their purpose, they rob the public service of much that it needs, while they cannot be induced to pay a private claim merely because it is just, or because distress will follow its non-payment.

On the 1st of January, 1815, the government owed John H. Piatt, an army contractor, $210,000 for rations furnished at 20 cents a ration, and Piatt stopped furnishing supplies. Monroe, then secretary of war, appealed to Piatt to continue to furnish the rations. As compensation for losses and for the uncertainty of payment, he made a verbal agreement with the contractor to pay "whatever price the rations might be reasonably worth" at the time and place of delivery. Under this new agreement, Piatt furnished rations which were adjudged to be worth 45 cents each. The aggregate of his claim against the United States was $328,532. The officers of the treasury refused to recognize the agreement made by Monroe with Piatt as binding, because it was not in writing, and sent the claimant back to his first contract, in which the government owed him $210,000. He was allowed only 20 cents a ration and the treasury computed the amount due at $148,792, leaving a disallowed balance of $179,740. The government officers claimed also that Piatt owed the treasury on an old unsettled commissary account $48,251, brought suit, and arrested Piatt. Congress in 1819 passed an act which reduced Piatt's claim for $179,740 to $48,251, the exact amount claimed by the government on the commissary accounts. Another undisputed claim of $63,620 for transportation was allowed Piatt, but as late as 1820, congress made no appropriation for its payment. Piatt's creditors grew impatient, threw him into the debtors prison, where he died in 1822. Two years after his death, congress made an appropriation for the payment of the $63,620. In 1874, more than fifty years after his death, and nearly sixty years after the debt became due, the supreme court decided that the verbal agreement made in 1815 between Secretary Monroe and Piatt was valid; that the latter was entitled to receive 45 cents for each ration furnished by him to the army of the Northwest; and that his heirs should be paid the whole amount of the claim of $179,740, less the government's demand of $48,251. No interest was allowed, for the United States is, says Mr. Nelson, not yet honest enough to pay interest, although it exacts every penny from its own debtors. This outrageous treatment was inflicted upon a man who had deserved the gratitude of his country by his liberal treatment of our soldiers in a time of national peril and general financial distress.

The court of claims, established in 1854, was enlarged in 1863 by the addition of two judges and clothed with full judicial powers and made a part of the Federal system, but it was not until 1866 that the supreme court recognized the court of claims as a tribunal from which appeals might be taken to the court of last resort. The court of claims can render judgment against the government, but it cannot issue a writ of execution to enforce the judgment, and as the appropriations are not made until after the judgments have been rendered the claimant may be compelled to wait a year or more for his money, a serious hardship, since the government, except in certain specified cases, pays no interest. In the case of the French spoliation claims our government, after assuming the obligations of France, refused to perform them; and even now congress declines to make provision for their payment, although the indebtedness of the United States has been established by the court. The sums found to be due and reported by the court were provided for last winter in the deficiency bill by the senate, but were thrown out in conference by the influence of a sectional opposition to the payment of this debt, because the creditors are principally from the Atlantic seaboard.

The Indian school at Carlisle, Penn., has fully demonstrated the possibility of teaching Indians to become skilled in mechanics and agriculture. To apply this knowledge, however, it is necessary for these Indians to remain within the limits of civilization for an indefinite length of time, as to return to their tribes, as the Indians graduated from the industrial school in Oregon have generally done, is to subject them to an environment of indolence and unthrift, the inevitable result of which is to counteract the work of the school. It is said that there are now about 600 young Indians scattered about through Pennsylvania working on farms. A few years of experience of this kind might, if it does not wholly unfit them for association with their people, fit them to return to the reservations, take lands in severalty and become prosperous farmers upon their own account. Certainly the life of an educated Indian among the whites must, as the years go on, become unsatisfactory, since it must be devoid of social and domestic relations that alone give a man an incentive to persistent, honest, cheerful endeavor, while to return such an Indian to tribal relations would be a cruelty second only to the return of Indian girls, who have been taught the ways of housewifery, neatness and thrift, to the filthy wigwams or malodorous huts of their race.

The fight for republican success in Montana grows warmer as the contest draws to a close. "The status of political affairs seems to be that the democrats have most money and their opponents most brains." The leaders of "the unterrified and unwashed" democracy have the shortest memories on record. Last year they bubbled over with love and admiration for Cleveland, "the best friend that Montana ever had," "the brave and fearless champion of the poor man's cause." Now they "don't know" the late president, they don't like him, and never did like him, notwithstanding the fact that Cleveland distributed many offices among the candidates their relations and friends. This plan of worshiping success and despising defeat always has characterized democratic conduct. Allegiance to party leaders don't count for much in the democratic camp. When a man goes down in that camp, like Cæsar, there are none so poor to do him reverence. It may be winning politics, but shows rather poor manhood.

The democrats in Iowa claim that the American farmer meets no foreign competition in the American market, and that consequently to talk of protecting him against foreign competition here is shear absurdity. Recent reports of the bureau of statistics, published by the treasury department, show that during the year 1889 there were imported into the United States the following stuffs that come directly in conflict with our farm products:

Breadstuffs, valued at	$ 8,029,724
Wool (unmanufactured)	17,974,515
Vegetables (potatoes, beans, etc.)	2,269,799
Domestic animals (dutiable)	3,936,768
Hides (free of duty)	25,127,750
Flax (hemp and other substitutes)	20,468,475
Flax seed	3,851,695
Tobacco (unmanufactured)	10,868,226
Meats and dairy products	1,774,391
Eggs (free)	2,418,976

This readily shows that even the moderate protection provided by the present tariff is not sufficient to give the American farmer complete control of his own market.

The democrats of Iowa, in the recent state convention, resolved "That we favor the Australian system of voting, to the end that we may have an honest ballot, uncontrolled by bribery or employers." The Australian system was tried in Minneapolis at a special election for aldermen held about two weeks since. The result was a light vote, as only 613 out of 2700 voters cared enough about the new system to vote under its provisions, and on this light vote the republican candidate was elected. The St. Paul and Minneapolis papers report that "beyond keeping away voters from the polls and putting to considerable unnecessary annoyance those who did vote, the Australian electoral system, as tried in Minneapolis, accomplished nothing of real importance."

State Senator Gibbs, of Georgia, who thinks that Lincoln was "a bloody tyrant," in a speech recently delivered before the legislature of that state, said that "the free negro is worthless as a laborer," and advocated a policy that would rid the South of its black population. With slave labor in 1860 the South raised 4,669,770 bales of cotton. The crop of 1888 amounted to 7,017,707 bales, in addition to which the free negro labor of that section produced other crops in greater profusion than was ever before known. Not only this, but the "despised" negro aided even more than the white man to develop the railroad building, mining, lumbering and manufacturing interests of the South.

Portugal is a free trade country, and according to letters from George B. Loring, United States minister to that nation, the farm laborer there must work four days in order to earn sufficient to purchase a bushel of corn. In the United States the ordinary laborer can buy five bushels of corn with the wages of a single day. It is such facts that make it a matter of surprise that any intelligent workingman should cast his political lot with a party that would seek to tear down the wall of protection erected about our native industries.

Japan has 1000 miles of railway in operation. China has only eighty-six and a half miles. But it is believed that China will soon enter upon an era of railroad building. A road is proposed from Pekin to Han-Kow, a port on Yang-tse river, whose foreign trade last year amounted to $55,000,000. This road will be 700 miles long. Last year the government proposed an extension of the short piece of road in operation, but the censors, astrologers and others worked upon the superstitions of the people and the government was forced to suspend operations. Floods, fires and other disasters have been attributed to the malign influence of the railway, and the government desisted, fearing an insurrection. There are objections also that graves will be disturbed and boatmen and cartmen deprived of work. It will take a long time to overcome these prejudices and superstitions.

It is reported that during this calendar year two million lives will be sacrificed in Africa upon the altar of greed, and about as many more forced into bondage. Great stretches of country in that continent will be turned into blood-red fields of carnage, while the civilized world gazes at the spectacle, and little is or will be done to stop the frightful traffic. C. P. Huntington has contributed $50,000 to build a railroad into the heart of Africa, which, if soon constructed, would aid in spreading civilization throughout the dark region. If a few other rich men would come to the front the slave trade could be abolished in a peaceful and speedy manner.

When Secretary Tracy, of the navy, on August 22 opened the bids for the construction of the cruisers Maine and Texas, he found that none of the competing builders would contract to build at the figures appropriated by the United States government. The work, however, will go on. The cruisers Maine and Texas will be built at the New York and Norfolk government navy yards, and there is no reason apparent why the ships may not be as well and economically constructed by the government as by private contract. If the government should succeed, the construction of a navy would proceed with great rapidity.

The government has a puzzling job on its hands in the settlement of Geronimo and his band. The people of North Carolina, where it was proposed to settle these savages strongly object to having them for neighbors, and suggest, through their governor, that Vermont is the place for them. The latter state is yet to hear from on the subject, but its people will no doubt appreciate the compliment of North Carolina's governor, who assures Secretary Proctor that no happier spot than that furnished by the mountains of the old granite state could be chosen for the purposes of such colonization.

THE CAUSE OF POVERTY.

The Weak Go to the Wall Because Justice is Not Done.

PENDLETON, Or., Sept. 25, 1889.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

In your editorial columns of the 24th inst. you quote these words from an article by Mr. Warren, whoever he is:

> There is no poverty in the world which does not have its source in personal depravity. The strong, healthy men are sure to prosper; and it is unquestionably for the advantage of the race that only they should endure. It is a hard law, but law it is, that the weak must go to the wall. Human beings may offer sympathies to them, but the great God is merciless, for He knows nothing except immutable law.

This is an exceedingly cruel, ignorant, barbarous argument, as foolish as it is cruel, and as antagonistic to the laws of nature as might is to right. "The strong, healthy men" are not sure to prosper. There are thousands of invalids, and creatures of depravity, in this world who are prosperous, rich, and growing richer day by day. The present system tends to depravity because wealth is not obtained through production, but through monopolization. If those who do the producing received all they produced the weak would not go to the wall, but the little production they would be able to accomplish would give them ample sustenance and make them happy and contented—and as life follows sunshine, health and strength would probably follow happiness.

"Human beings may offer sympathy to them"—bah! Warren is made up of gush. Sympathy is unnecessary. It is as erroneous as selfishness. It is an error bred by other errors. If men and women had justice, sympathy would not be necessary in their cases.

"The great God is merciless." Yes, that he is, but the great God in this connection is nothing but an imaginary demon placed on the throne of man's ignorance and selfishness. One has to be wrapped up in self, in seeking after riches for the sake of riches only, to believe in the mercilessness of the "Great God."

"Immutable law." There is only one kind, and that is nature's law, but it does not bring crime suffering and poverty down on the heads of men. Failing to follow it, and in the concerted attempt of setting up laws of our own, antagonistic to nature's law, does bring us these troubles. Man's laws are erroneous are selfish, are brutal, are unjust, do drive the weak to the wall, do drive men into crime, poverty, degradation and misery, but God's law (nature's) never! never!! Man's laws are not immutable, because they were made by man, and anything he can make or has made, will be destroyed.

Justice is nature's first law, and under a just system, and that means a plain, simple system, devoid of every complication, the weak will receive their due, and if weakness is proven to be an error it will be eradicated with the other errors, and all men will be strong and just.

We are progressing toward perfection, and if we are, imperfect things in time will be done away with, and erroneous laws and injustices are included among the sweeping away of imperfect things.

"Tariff reform" is the beginning, the entering wedge, of the fight for justice and good will to all men, who "are created equal; endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness; that to secure these rights governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed; that, whenever any form of government becomes destructive of those ends, it is the right of the people to alter or to abolish it, and to institute a new government, laying its foundation on such principles, and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness."

This means, if it means anything, a growth toward perfection, destruction of Warren's "immutable law" which gives to the monopolizer, usurer, idler, speculator and highwaymen, that which belongs by right to the producer. The producer's poverty increases as the riches of the non-producing classes increases. Here is the principal reason of the weak being driven to the wall.

Justice is not done.

AN APPEAL TO THE IRISH.

The Sons of Erin Will Henceforth Pay Tribut to Republicanism.

VANCOUVER, Wn., Sept. 27.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

Over a year ago I wrote a short communication to your paper, rather prophetic in its character and more or less political. It was before the state election of last year, and I believe what I said then of Mr. Hermann's chances of success was more than verified in the sweeping republican majority your state gave. Now we are passing through a similar ordeal, and will have an election on our hands next Tuesday on this side of the Columbia, won't you be kind enough to allow me space to discuss a few items of interest in this campaign?

I am a republican; a native of that ill-fated island across the Atlantic that some poet said stood "with its back towards Britain and its face to the west"—Ireland. Mostly in every campaign when politics is a paramount subject, republicans to the manor born have often asked me why it was that the Irish adopted citizen invariably voted the democratic ticket. Well, of course this is a very complicated question, but I could never get the average American button holed in a fence corner long enough to explain the why and wherefore; he was always in too big a hurry to make money in some more paying avocation than dry politics, and I think it is too late now to throw light on this subject, as a fair proportion of the thinking, if not the leading men of this element, have already pulled their necks out of the yoke and have gone far beyond the reach of the democratic lash. There were good and valid reasons for the Irish adopted citizen to adhere to that conservative institution commonly designated the democratic party.

Away back in the '40s and early in '50 those who escaped a pauper's grave or a poorhouse prison, came to this country in or about '53, '54 '55, their five years alien probation expiring, they began to take out their papers of citizenship. Their first look out was for party affiliations. Republicanism was then merely in its incipiency, the whig party had fought its last fight and couldn't lift its head since Scott's defeat in '52; know-nothing-ism was rampant, aggressive, and even criminally destructive to the property of some of these people; democracy was fresh, vigorous and in its haughtiest mood. What party could they join? Why of course democracy. They couldn't be "know-nothings" even if they were willing to join that party. About this time Governor Wise, of Virginia, undertook to squelch this proscriptive party. He succeeded in destroying the organization but not the spirit of the party. You find that to-day existing in most of our communities, mostly in mugwumpism, and largely with disappointed soreheads.

Governor Wise did not do this for any love for his newly acquired adherents of foreign birth, but simply to maintain our boast that we were the leading advocate of religious freedom all the world over; and for this squelching of the know-nothing party the Irish-American is expected to keep on voting for democracy till long after the away down southern Arkansan or Kentuckian have ceased voting for General Jackson. The extension of human slavery and its results, the war of the rebellion, brought on new issues, and with our vaunted intelligence and liberty-loving shibboleths, the Irish as an element should have kept abreast of progress, and practice in civil life in the exercise of their suffrage what they preached on the battlefields from Gettysburg to New Orleans, and emulate the conduct of their greatest countryman, O'Connell, who when in 1843, in the zenith of his repeal glory, some southern admirers of his agitation sent him $1000, he returned the money, saying, "Take it back, our country shall never be freed through the assistance of funds wrung from the sweat and blood of the negro slave." For his now historic expression the Irish race in America gained the undying respect and gratitude of Wendell Phillips.

Let us come down to epochs within the memory of younger citizens. Allen, Larkin and O'Brien were executed in Manchester, England, in 1867, charged with constructive murder, for the killing of Sergeant Brett, the conductor of a prison van. Even our schoolboys are familiar with the rescue of Colonel Tom Kelly and Captain Deasy. By the way, the man who accidentally killed Brett is now in either the treasury or postoffice department in Washington. O'Brien, who had served four years in Meagher's Irish brigade, and was severely wounded in the battle of the Wilderness, in his trial, as a dernier ressort, produced his commission and naturalization papers. The former was respected by the law officers of the crown, but his citizen's papers were laughed at, spat upon and thrown aside, and in all probability the big wax seal of the surrogate of New York was swept away with the other court rubbish in that English courtroom. The crown solicitor, in giving his opinion, said "England never acknowledged the right of her subjects to expatriation or become citizens of any other nation." At the same time the law officers of the crown, for prudential reasons, asked Charles Francis Adams, our then minister at the court of St. James, "Have you any claim on this man?" (O'Brien). He (Adams) replied that the United States government would not interfere with British justice in this case. O'Brien was executed with the other two. Nine years after, when Charles F. Adams was the democratic candidate for governor of Massachusetts, in 1876, he was defeated, and for the first time in our political history the Irish-American voter slipped beyond the party lash. Our state department, of course, took cognizance of this flagrant case, but Andrew Johnson, who filled the chair of our martyred Lincoln, and whose Tennessean democratic proclivities got the better of his republican judgment, made no move in the matter, till President Grant, two years later in the winter of '69–'70, took up the question, and England was obliged to relinquish her claim, which had become as sacred in her unwritten constitution as that the four Georges were kings by the grace of God. This was the last diplomatic service accomplished by Reverdy Johnson before retiring to civil life. Bancroft made the Iron Duke toe the mark also, in Berlin. This was the bitterest pill Bismarck had to swallow in his prime ministership before William was made emperor. Who then are we to thank the most, the democracy or the party who gave us a Grant? Democracy had control of eight administrations from 1828 when Jackson was elected president, to 1860—thirty-two years all told. Can we find in searching our congressional records in that time any president, secretary of state, diplomat or jurist, that raised his voice to relieve us from this indignity? We were citizens of paper and while within the limits of the United States. But they tell us the republicans were all "knownothings," they lie. Tweed, Oakey Hall and James Brooks of Credit Mobilier fame were "knownothings." Henry Wilson in his canvass, when nominated for vice president with Grant, was twitted for his "know-nothing" leaning in '52–'53. He acknowledged it like a man, and asked, "What are you going to do about it?" Scratch your democratic leaders and you'll find an Abram Hewitt or a General Bragg inside him, the two most notorious "knownothings" to-day above ground. It is a notorious fact that in the Grant-Seymour campaign in '68, democrats bragged that their party had 98 per cent of the Irish-American vote, and yet in the face of this as soon as Grant got into executive harness he emancipated them, set them on their feet for the first time as citizens, equal to those born under the shadows of Bunker Hill monument. We must respect ourselves and also respect our suffrage, and be no longer classed with shotgun politicians or the whippers of negroes. Irish Americans of Washington, come away from those who said the war was a failure, come away from the party who at Ellensburgh the other day indorsed every act of Cleveland, from the gathering up of the old flags to be sent surreptitiously down South to his hob-nobbing with Joe Chamberlain, who was the secret agent of the Cobden Club. Vote a clean unscratched republican ticket, and by Wednesday morning next let us be assured that the United States senate's majority has been increased two, and our house of representatives one more. Had Cleveland, when urged strongly by a mass delegation, given a place in his cabinet to Patrick Collins, his constituents in the Bay state wouldn't feel snubbed, but he bluntly refused and gave the place to Whitney, the man that drove John Roach to his grave, damaged his ship-building industry, and drove thousands out of employment.

Bright Faces Paling With Ill Health

Regain their pristine roundness and color, and the listless, haggard aspect of the feeble and nervous, is succeeded by the animated freshness of returning vigor when ladies troubled with anaemia or a disease of vital stamina, revert to Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with the Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda, a preparation which has met with the approval of American, English and continental physicians. For Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma, and indeed all affections of the organ of respiration it is a most beneficent specific. It counteracts Scrofula, Rheumatism, remedies the wasting maladies of children, is free from a nauseous flavor and preserves its freshness under climatic and atmospheric conditions which would turn the ordinary preparations from the Cod Liver Oil rancid. The Hypophosphites add greatly to its value as a nutriment of the feeble.

Do not take any chances of being poisoned or burned to death with liquid Stove Polish, paints, and enamels in bottles. The "Rising Sun Stove Polish" is safe, odorless, brilliant, the cheapest and best stove polish made, and the consumer pays for no expensive tin or glass package with every purchase.

FASTENINGS.

All ceiling and outboard planking to be wrought to the frames with composition spikes of suitable length, and California locust tree-nails driven from the outside and wedged, to make first-class work. The gangway deck planking (3x6 inches cedar), to be laid in white lead and fastened with composition spikes, driven edgeways of the deck as (edge up), and a thorough binding bolt, [illegible] inch diameter and flat headed, driven from outside through the plankshear, gangway deck plank and coamings, and set up inside the coamings with a nut and washer. One bolt every frame.

Iron rod stanchions every other frame of [illegible] inch rods, with an eye and shoulder wrought in the top end and coarse thread screw on bottom, to be driven down through the coamings, through a gas-pipe ferule or sleeve, having a washer at top and bottom to give a bearing at each end and screw into the keelson, which is to be wrought to the shape of the ceiling and through bolted with galvanized iron bolts, before planking. All bolts below the water line to be of composition, and above of galvanized iron, except keel bolts, which may be of galvanized iron; all bolts to be clinched on rings when possible.

Deck planks in center to be laid in white lead and clamped into place and fastened from below with lag-screws. All other fastenings to conform to other finish. Copper [illegible] bolts.

DECK AND PILOT HOUSE.

A suitable deck and pilot house to be constructed in accordance with the plans, sufficient for the crew and cooking arrangements, to be built of Oregon fir, framed and paneled outside in sugar pine and inside the pilot house with hardwood finish, suitable windows, sashes with cords and weights, panel doors, brass mountings, butt hinges and locks.

TOWING BITTS AND WINDLASS, ETC.

Suitable iron towing bitts and two iron mooring bitts forward and two aft, to be fastened to the hatchway coamings with through holding bolts 1¼ inches diameter, with washer and nut beneath. Suitable hatchways, companion-ways and skylights to be constructed of hard wood as desired, with brass hinges and fastenings, gratings for hawser, pins, cleats, etc.

All the usual and necessary parts to make a perfect whole, to be furnished whether herein specified or not.

BOILERS, MACHINERY, ETC.

The boilers for this steamer to be of first-class construction, 250 horse-power, and to pass inspection by the U. S. inspectors. To be of water-tube variety, of ample capacity for driving the propelling engines and steam pumps at the same time, if necessary. To be of very quick steaming capacity, easy of access for inspection, cleaning and repairs; great durability and economy of fuel and adapted to either coal or wood. Steam at a pressure of 160 pounds per square inch.

The boat to be driven by one pair of condensing engines 15x15 inches, the cranks set at right angles and capable of driving the boat at the rate of twelve knots per hour, or more. To have an independent condenser, air and circulating pumps of suitable size for the engines; also connections for the exhaust of the fire pumps with the condenser. All suitable brass outboard connections for valves, etc. Manganese bronze propeller [illegible] feet diameter, and gun-metal outboard bearings.

FIRE PUMPS, ETC.

The fire pumps to be of special design for this boat, built in pairs and two sets, or four pumps in all, so that one, or both pairs can be used as required, combining great power and simplicity. The steam cylinders 12x12 inches and water cylinders (plunger form) 8 [illegible] inches, equal to four first-class fire engines. The plunger form has been chosen in preference to piston style, on account of the larger body of water in the casting, easier access for inspection and less liability to derangement in using dirty, or gritty, water. The water casing or plunger to be of gun metal (copper and tin), and plunger rod cased in a brass sleeve. All valves to be of regulation [illegible] and rubber. Strainers, suctions and [illegible] of brass and copper, where water comes in contact. These pumps will discharge into an upright wrought iron receiver, 4 feet diameter and 6 feet high, to stand a pressure of 150 pounds per square inch, to be carefully asphaltumed inside and painted, felted and lagged outside with ornamental head, to stand in front part of [illegible] house. This receiver is to have a large [illegible] in front to carry a central discharge nozzle of 5 inches diameter, for a "Giant" stand-pipe 20 feet long, swiveled to [illegible], or swing to either side and discharge a [illegible] to 4 inch stream; also around this central nozzle, 8 nozzles to connect the usual [illegible]-inch fire department hose, each to discharge an 1½ inch stream to 200 or 300 feet. A connection will also be made with the receiver for a second "Giant" aft on the trunk deck, to carry a four-inch stream 200 feet, or a smaller one, if desired, a greater distance. This "Giant" will be constructed of gun-metal, mounted on a brass housing, which will also have discharge connections for four [illegible] and one-half inch hose in usual manner. This "Giant" will be built on the well-known style of those used in California for hydraulicking the gold bank gravel deposits, and [illegible] tear any ordinary frame building into pieces, if within range.

In addition to these larger hose connections [illegible] sets of one and one-half inch lighter hose with suitable round and spraying nozzles mounted on reels already connected with the pumps, which can at once be carried on board a ship or steamer by one man, or into a vessel's cabin, and the hose or spray used to extinguish a fire with the minimum of time and damage.

The stand-pipe "Giant" forward will have a ladder arrangement on the upper side and supported by a suitable topping lift, so that a man can run up its inclined surface and [illegible] a vessel's side higher than the fire-boat and carry a hose or other implement with him, or to the wharf at low tide, or a hose can be connected therewith to supply suction for fire engines on shore.

Chemical Engines.—Two suitable copper tanks, sixty gallons each, and light hose, to extinguish fires on board vessels or along city front. Babcock hand extinguishers.

SAND PUMP AND OTHER ADJUNCTS.

Independent suction holes will be constructed through the sides of the vessel under the guard, with suitable brass door and fastening, near the fire pumps, so that a suction can be run through into water outside, in case of any derangement of the main suction through the bottom of the vessel. A sand pump of brass and rubber will have connections with the main pumps, so that sand or mud can be pumped from the river, or sewage removed into a barge. This pump will be arranged to pump sand, mud or sewage at a distance of several hundred feet from the boat, and none of the matter will go through the main pumps; only clear water to actuate the sand pump. In this way the docks and city front can be kept clean, and deep water for shipping.

THE WATER JET STEERER.

A peculiar and prominent feature of this boat will be the water jet steerer, the invention of W. F. Herrick, the designer of this boat, and is the result of several years of thought and investigation.

Every engineer knows the power of the reaction water wheel, of which variety the Pelton and Knight ("hurdy-gurdy" wheels, so called by miners) are prominent and well known examples, where about 80 to 90 per cent. of the dynamical power in a column of water is given off through a nozzle. The arrangement here of this well known principle, is to connect the receiver with proper pipes ending in openings on the two sides of the bow, and one pipe ahead, also similar pipes aft and astern; by a simple arrangement of valves operated by levers in the pilot house; or the same result can be arrived at by means of curved nozzles forward and aft, operated in a well-hole by suitable mechanism; but for this vessel preference is given to the first arrangement. In handling the boat with these pipes, or nozzles, the captain or pilot in the pilot house has only to turn the stream through one of these openings, to push that part of the boat in the opposite direction, and as much or little water as required can be used in doing this, as the urgency of the case demands. One stream can be used at the bow and one at the stern, and turn the boat on her center; or both streams on the same side and push the boat broadside, bodily to port or starboard, or a sideways and ahead, or astern motion can be given at the same time by using the ahead, or astern motion as well as the sideways stream. Thus the boat can be placed and held in any position by these jets, entirely independent of the propelling power of the engines, rudder, current or tide. The efficiency of the boat will thus be materially increased, because no spring-lines or hawsers are required to hold her in place, and can promptly move her to a new position as required by the exigencies of a fire.

LIGHTNING, FIRE SUITS, ETC.

Electric lights will be used for the vessel; the dynamo driven by a pump actuating a "hurdy gurdy" wheel, encased in a brass housing, and attached direct to the dynamo, thus avoiding an independent engine, or belt for driving the same.

Asbestos fire-proof suits will be provided, so that a fireman can fight a fire at close quarters, with impunity, and asbestus curtains for protecting the boat from fire.

A spraying nozzle to be provided by which a spray of water can be projected before and around the hoseman, thus condensing heat and smoke and enabling him to fight the fire at close quarters.

Suitable cooking range, berths, bedding, cooking utensils, etc., for the crew. Ropes, tackles, etc. Other items are not here enumerated, but the main and essential parts are outlined above, showing a material and notable advance on anything ever heretofore built for a fire-boat; combining power, celerity of movement, and completeness for every duty.

OLYMPIA'S CLAIM.

OLYMPIA, Sept. 27, 1889.

To the Editor of The Oregonian:

The respective advantages of Ellensburgh, North Yakima and Pasco, as candidate for the state capital, have been so fully set forth through the subsidized press of the territory that it has been a difficult matter for Olympia, which for so many years has been the territorial capital, to get a word in ever edgewise until the last moment, when the votes of the people are about to decide her eligibility to continue as capital of the new state.

No doubt she would have had more assistance from the press had she been able to offer thousands of dollars, and hundreds of choice town lots for the privilege, but she has had neither to offer, and comes before the people depending on true merit alone for recognition. True, she offers a ready built state house amply sufficient for state purposes for several years to come, and the sixty-thousand-dollar tract of land on which it is built. And in reference to this it might be stated that the capital building at Olympia is not now what it used to be in olden times. The lower house is capable of accommodating one hundred members and the necessary clerks and reporters, while the senate chamber has been enlarged and a fine room built for the state library.

The beautiful scenery in and about Olympia, which has been so often favorably commented upon by members of the legislature who have come here from east of the mountains, need hardly be referred to at this late day, being too well known to need repetition. But she possesses other advantages, and to these I shall address myself more particularly. According to the census report just received by the territorial auditor, the population of Thurston county, of which Olympia is the county seat, is 7236, of which Olympia contains 4000. And the population of the eighteen counties west of the Cascade range is greater by 44,284 than that of the sixteen counties on the eastern side. The population of the seven counties which surround North Yakima and Ellensburgh respectively is 22,819, while the population of the seven counties adjacent to Olympia reaches the enormous sum of 95,595. And yet, the citizens of the two former places would have intelligent voters believe that Olympia is not the center of population. This is but a sham policy and nothing in the world but a big game of "bluff," as the Yakima Ledger puts it. But the citizens of Washington territory are not likely to be misled by any such foolish propositions. It has recently been denied by an Ellensburgh correspondent of The Oregonian that the capitals in a majority of the states are not in the geographical center of their respective states, and yet it must have been sheer ignorance or perversity which lead "Old Timer" into such an error. He should certainly have known that twenty-eight is a majority of thirty-eight, and had he but examined the map of the country he would very easily have seen that in these twenty-eight states the capitals are situated anywhere but centrally. If the capital of a state or country must be exactly in the center, where should the national capital be today? Taking Alaska into consideration, Olympia is nearer the center of America than the city of Washington.

It has been suggested that it is of no advantage to a town to make it a capital city—that it does not serve in any way to enrich it and that, therefore, Olympia should be very glad to get the burden off her shoulders and on to some younger and more energetic town. Granted that such is the case, did any one ever hear of a senator or member of congress who did not feel himself fully competent to undertake the same honorable service year after year until finally he ends his life in the service of his constituents, without reaping any greater reward than the record he had made for himself during life. So it is with Olympia. She has faithfully done her duty as a capital for thirty-six years—done it honorably, and to the best of her ability, and now that this great territory is emerging into statehood, she simply asks to be retained as a faithful servant in the same position which she has filled so long with credit to herself, and the people with whom she has come in contact. All she asks is a fair deal, and a full and careful consideration of her merits, and she has no doubt that if accorded these two points she will poll a large majority vote next Tuesday.

Reports coming in from all parts of the territory are very favorable to Olympia, and bets on three thousand majority are freely offered, with but few takers.

It should be remembered that Olympia is not the insignificant place upon which the press favoring Ellensburg and North Yakima lay such stress. Her freight and passenger traffic is fully as large, if not larger, than any other town of her size in the territory. From Agent Percival, of the O. R. & N. Company's line, it has been ascertained that the freight list to Olympia over that line alone amounted this year to something over four thousand tons and when all the other lines are taken into consideration thirty thousand tons yearly would be a fair estimate of our freight traffic. Time would fail to tell of all our other advantages, such as railway and steamboat facilities, a hotel second to none on the coast, a healthy climate, good drinking water, (not alkali), chances to hunt, fish and bathe such as neither Ellensburgh or Yakima can boast of, a complete system of sewerage, beautiful drives, fine parks, magnificent shade trees, churches, schools, delicious clams and oysters—fresh from their natural beds—of which latter as much as 1000 sacks are shipped weekly to Portland and other points—all these, combined with a hospitable people who are never known to impose on strangers coming within the confines of their town. For these, and many other reasons, it would be advisable to vote for Olympia first, last and all the time.

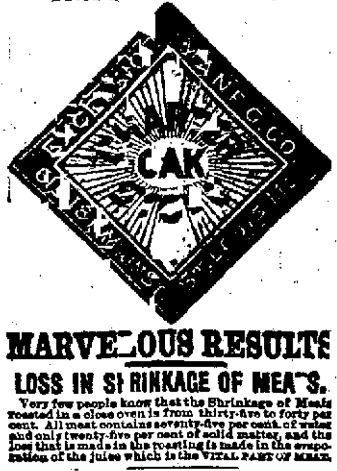
MEATS ROASTED IN THEIR OWN JUICES, BY USING THE

WIRE GAUZE OVEN DOOR

FOUND EXCLUSIVELY ON THE



MARVELOUS RESULTS

LOSS IN SHRINKAGE OF MEATS.

Very few people know that the Shrinkage of Meats roasted in a close oven is from thirty-five to forty per cent. All meat contains seventy-five per cent. of water and only twenty-five per cent of solid matter, and the loss that is made in the roasting is made in the evaporation of the juice which is the VITAL PART OF MEAT.

Effect of the SOLID OVEN Door.

A TEN pound Sirloin, medium or well-done, will be REDUCED to SIX pounds and four ounces of Roasted Meat, showing a loss of three pounds and twelve ounces of juice. While the loss is 37½ per cent of the total weight, it shows the enormous LOSS OF FIFTY PER CENT OF THE JUICE.

Effect of WIRE GAUZE OVEN Door.

A TEN pound Sirloin, medium or well-done, will be reduced to nine pounds and eight ounces of Roasted Meat, showing a loss of eight ounces of juice. While this loss is five per cent of the total weight, it shows the very small LOSS OF BUT SEVEN PER CENT OF JUICE.

VISITING THE ALBATROSS.

A Great Many Persons Went on Board the Steamer Yesterday.

A Fine Collection—Complete Apparatus—The Laboratory—A Fine Jolly Crew—Dredges—Alleged "Mermaid" Show.

Although the fish commission steamer Albatross was not officially announced as open to visitors yesterday, a large number were admitted, among whom were many ladies.

The fine collection of fishes and other marine animals preserved in alcohol and arranged around the laboratory in brackets make a very interesting exhibition, and one interested in such things could spend hours there pleasantly and profitably.

There is a complete photographing apparatus and dark room for the photographer on board, and around the walls of the laboratory are many fine photographs of curious fish caught, the crew in the act of hoisting in a shark, scenes in Alaska, showing how the natives cure salmon, and many other interesting things.

The collection of fishing lines, trawls, dip-nets, dredges, etc., and the harpoons, lances, and guns for firing bombs to kill whale, and many other implements used in the capture of fish, are all strange to most of the visitors.

A large map of the coast from Cape Sebastian to the far North is marked with figures showing the soundings taken and other work done by the Albatross.

In the laboratory are several aquaries, which were stocked with marine curiosities, all of which died when the vessel came into fresh water. They are now stocked with fish caught alongside and attract almost as much attention as if the fish were of strange species. In two large glass jars a number of salmon eggs have been placed, among which water is constantly flowing, and which will soon begin to hatch out.

To explain everything in the laboratory to a constant stream of visitors would soon wear out any man, so a number of the blue jackets were detailed to attend to visitors and they never tire of answering questions, although some asked them were rather queer. For instance, in a corner of the laboratory hangs from the ceiling a small anchor or grapnel, for anchoring a small boat. It has four flukes which fold up alongside the shank like the ribs of an umbrella alongside the handle. A sailor who was explaining the [illegible] of this to a group of visitors was astonished when one of them innocently asked what kind of fish they caught with it. He evidently thought some big fish swallowed it, and then the flukes were spread out, making it difficult for the fish to let go.

It is so seldom that the uniform of the American navy is seen here that even the sailors on board the Albatross are objects of interest to the visitors. There are some seventy of them and a very fine looking gentlemanly [illegible] behaved lot they are.

Of course, like all sailors, they have to attend to sewing on their own buttons and mending their own clothes, but the spirit of progress has penetrated the forecastle, and instead of using a needle and thread, as sailors have done since the days of Columbus, these blue jackets have a nice hand power sewing machine, and it was interesting to see how deftly a tall fellow turned the crank with one hand and attended to feeding the machine with the other.

On the wharf are displayed several dredges used for dragging up treasures from the vasty deep and [illegible], a triangular iron frame, from which is attached long wisps of rope yarn. This being dragged along the bottom entangles and brings up coral and many small animals. Yesterday a lot of boys were giving this a thorough overhauling and finding many curiosities.

Nowadays whenever a considerable number of people are gathered together a fakir is sure to be about. Taking advantage of the number of visitors going down to the Albatross, two fellows yesterday stretched an old canvas around some of the posts under the upper roadway on the wharf, hung out a hideous picture and started a show of the "great sea monster with ears, eyes and mouth like a human being, captured alive off the Island of Jamaica. Only a dime, the tenth of a dollar, to see this great curiosity, walk in ladies and gentlemen," etc., etc.

But very few walked in, and those who did found laid out cold and stiff, on an old box, a very dilapidated specimen of a "mermaid" of Japanese manufacture, such as is sometimes seen in curio shops or in saloons frequented by seafaring men.

HOT FIGHT WITH A SQUIRREL

A Small Terrier Tackles a Big Gray Fox, and Gets the Worst of It.

Big gray fox squirrels are becoming quite common in some parts of this state. They are very active, graceful animals and very well able to take care of themselves. When surprised they get on the other side of a big fir tree, if one is handy, and never stop till they have climbed to a region where they are practically out of reach of shotgun or rifle. When cornered they can fight their weight in bull dogs or wild cats.

A week ago Mr. R. H. Dement, while strolling through the umbrageous woods of Clackamas county, accompanied by his Dandy Dinmont terrier, jumped up one of these squirrels, which, seeing the dog made for the tree within reach, which happened to be a sapling, up which he elevated himself with the speed of lightning. Mr. Dement undertook to shake the squirrel down, but it was not ripe for falling, and it was not until both he and the sapling were nearly worn out that the long-tailed animal concluded to take a tumble.

The dog had been an interested spectator, and the squirrel dropped, as it were, into his mouth. It was too big for a mouthful, however, and the terrier seized it by the scruff of the neck, and a dreadful struggle took place. Mr. Dement seized a club and took the part of the dog, of course, but which of the two he hit the oftenest is not known. The fight lasted for some time, but the squirrel, seeing he was outnumbered, finally "broke away" and sailed off into the tall timber. How he has been feeling since is not known, but the terrier made his appearance in public yesterday for the first time in a week.

THEY WERE SERVED RIGHT

Two Fellows Who Got Well Thrashed for Fooling With Street Car Drivers

A driver on one of the street railways displayed a badly bunged eye yesterday. Another driver, when asked the cause, said that Saturday evening two young men got on a car on G street, and commenced fooling with the brake on the rear platform.

After they had put it on and off several times, the driver went back and asked them to let the brake alone. One of the fellows applied some opprobrious epithets to the driver, and the other [illegible] him a biff in the eye. The driver was hampered by a rubber coat, but seized the switch iron and a struggle ensued for possession of it. The driver at length secured it and whaling away with it struck the fellow who hit him across the shoulder, knocking him clear off the car. The other tough then jumped off and the driver went along with his car.

A few days since, a fellow boarded a car on Third street near the Taylor street church and began using bad language as some ladies from the church were getting into the car. The driver told him to stop, when he continued pouring out a torrent of abuse. The driver took him out on the rear platform, half choked the life out of him, bent him over the rail, broke his umbrella in two and then threw him off on his back in the mud. Such fellows will find that civility pays, even on a street car.

THEY ARE PUSHING THE WORK

Vigorously on the Cable Road—Operations on the Second Street Line.

A large force of men were at work all day yesterday on the cable road, notwithstanding the showery weather. The excavation is completed, the yokes in and the rails in place on the block between Morrison and Yamhill, and about half way from Morrison to Alder.

Men were at work excavating away up to Salmon street. The street all along is away be on the grade, and after the track is laid the property owners will have to do some grading and improving. The part of the road at present under construction is about the worst part. Crossings have to be put in at Morrison and Yamhill streets and there are also ten fire cisterns to have new tops put on and on one the entrance will have to be changed so as to place it between the tracks.

If the company gets a franchise to build a branch down Alder street to Front they will have to put in crossings at Fourth, Third, Second and First. Superintendent Sims says that it is difficult to get as many men as are wanted for the work, but a hundred more will be put on as soon as possible.

A number of men were also at work yesterday on Second street completing the paving in the vicinity of Morrison street for the convenience of the large traffic there. Times have changed in regard to street railroad building as well as other things.

THE MYSTERY IN ROOM NO. 36

Who Was It That Did the Shooting in a Cambridge Block Apartment Yesterday Morning?

"Who are the occupants of room 36?"

This question was asked by everyone rooming in the Cambridge block, corner Third and Morrison streets, of their neighbors.

For some time the roomers in that building have had their slumbers disturbed by the occupants of the room referred to. Late Saturday night the man and woman who it is said jointly occupy the room, commenced quarreling and continued at intervals until an early hour the next morning. The disturbance was so great that many of the roomers were unable to go to sleep.

At 1:30 o'clock yesterday morning those who had succeeded in getting to sleep as well as those awake in the building, were startled by the sharp report of a revolver and the breaking of glass in room 36, immediately followed by a sound as of some one falling to the floor heavily. In a very few minutes the whole house was astir. Everyone thought that a murder had been committed, and, as the case now looks, an attempt was made.

Those who arrived at the door first found the front, which was of ground, or frosted glass, shattered. This was evidently done by the bullet. One of the roomers claims that he heard a woman on the inside of the room groaning as if in great agony, but, as he was refused admittance, he was unable to find out whether the woman was suffering from a blow, or pistol shot wound.

A reporter yesterday conversed with half a dozen roomers in the Cambridge block on the subject of the shooting, but they all shrugged their shoulders and said that they did not know who the man and woman are, but that they would like to. The reporter knocked at the shattered door of room 36, but received no response. He then tried the knob, but found the door locked.

There is no doubt but a shot was fired, but by whom? Officer Charles Holsapple, the regular officer on that beat, told the reporter that he was on First and Taylor streets when the shot was fired. He heard it distinctly, although the report sounded muffled as if fired in some building. He immediately ran to the vicinity where from the sound he thought the shot was fired, but after a diligent search was unable to locate it.

This case is certainly very mysterious and warrants a full and thorough investigation. It cannot be proved that the shot was fired intentionally. [illegible] the man is he was drunk and very disorderly.

LIBERATI'S SACRED CONCERT

About One Thousand People Treated to Fine Music at the Exposition Building

The ponderous machinery in the great exposition building was still yesterday, and Signor Liberati's military band discoursed sacred music to about 1000 appreciative people from 2 to 5. The clouded sky, the muddy streets and the rain that poured down at intervals prevented a larger attendance. Signor Liberati was at his best. His cornet solo took the audience by storm. The songs by Madame Lomani and Signor Bolli and the trio from Verdi's Attila, by Signors Pesci and Bolli and Madame Lomani, delighted everybody.

Following is the music programme for to-night:

March	Liberati
Overture—"Domino Noir"	Auber
Waltz—"La Serenata de Espanola"	Metra
Contralto Solo—"Faust" Madame Casanta	Gounod

A Cleveland, O., Lawyer Pays a Compliment to Portland Enterprise

George F. Foster, a prominent attorney of Cleveland, O., was shown about the city a few days ago. He was first taken to the exposition building.

"Have you a building like that in Cleveland?" asked his chaperone.

"We have not," answered Mr. Foster.

As the visitor noticed the time of day by the clock in the High school tower he was asked: "Have you a school building in Cleveland that beats this one?"

"We have not."

The third scene took place in front of the new hotel. "Have you as fine a hotel as that in Cleveland?" was the question.

"We have not," Mr. Foster answered. "When I return to Cleveland I will tell the people that away off in Oregon there is a city that has a hotel, an exposition building and a high school that cannot be equaled anywhere."

VILLARD'S LATEST SCHEME.

Northern Pacific Stockholders to Vote on His Blanket Mortgage Plan.

The Financier Confident of Success—An Effort to Oust Hostile Directors—The Purposes for Which the Gold Bonds Are To Be Used

Railroad men here are taking considerable interest in the meeting of the holders of Northern Pacific preferred stock which will be held in New York city on October 17, to vote on Henry Villard's plan for a consolidated mortgage, under which no more than $160,000,000 gold bonds shall be issued, having 100 years to run and bearing not to exceed 5 per cent interest. This plan is favored by Villard, Colgate Hoyt, T. F. Oakes, Charles L. Colby, George A. Morrison, Charles H. Leland, J. B. Haggin and David H. Houghtaling.

Word comes from New York that Villard is working as hard to get control of a majority of the preferred stock as he worked to control the O. R. & N. election last June. He feels confident that the stockholders will sustain his blanket mortgage scheme. Why shouldn't they? [illegible] said in an interview recently [illegible] is certainly strictly conservative and all the measures proposed are mainly in the interest of the stockholders. There is much opposition to the plan, and Mr. Villard is not going to have a walk over. Every issue of the bonds must be sanctioned by nine of the thirteen directors. Villard claims to have six votes now and feels sure that he will be able to get the other three before election. The proposed gold bonds are for the following purposes:

For the retirement of first, second and third mortgage bonds	$81,202,000
For the retirement of the existing branch bonds	6,000,000
For the construction, purchase or lease of tributary roads at a rate not exceeding $30,000 per mile	18,000,000
For the acquisition, construction and enlargement of terminals and stations, additional rolling stock and betterments and renewals not properly chargeable to operating expenses, for the surplus returns due to the [illegible] reorganization, and for premiums on prior mortgage bonds now outstanding, about	[illegible]
Total	$160,000,000

A general meeting of the Northern Pacific stockholders will be held on the day that the blanket mortgage is to be voted on. Mr. Villard and his associates ask them to elect a board of directors pledged to carry out the following programme:

First—That the company offer alike to the holders of the $37,[illegible] of preferred and $49,000,000 of common stock the privilege of subscribing at 85 for an amount equal to [illegible] per cent of the respective holdings—[illegible] of the new gold bonds to be issued under the consolidated mortgage and to bear interest at the rate of five per cent.

Second—That there shall be set aside a dividend reserve fund an amount in bonds equal to the surplus earnings due to the preferred stock under the plan of reorganization up to the end of the fiscal year closing June 30, 1889, which amount is officially reported at $3,841,000.

Third—That a dividend of not less than one per cent shall be paid quarterly, the first to be payable on January 1, 1890, to the preferred stockholders out of the current net earnings, if they be insufficient then out of the dividend reserve fund until the net earnings shall justify larger dividends.

Five of the directors of the present board are hostile to Villard, and the story goes that the Villard men are taking steps to oust them. Villard denies this.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

ABSOLUTELY PURE.

For quick raising, the Royal Baking Powder is superior to all other leavening agents. It is absolutely pure and wholesome and of the highest leavening power. It is always uniform in strength and quality and never fails to make light, sweet, most palatable and nutritive food. Bread, biscuits, muffins, cake, etc., raised with Royal Baking Powder may be eaten hot without distressing results to the most delicate digestive organs. It will keep in any climate without deterioration.

Prof. H. A. Mott, U. S. Government Chemist, after examining officially the principal baking powders of the country, reported:

"The Royal Baking Powder is absolutely pure, for I have so found it in many tests made both for that company and the United States Government.

"Because of the facilities that company have for obtaining perfectly pure cream of tartar, and for other reasons dependent upon the proper proportions of the same, and the method of its preparation, the Royal Baking Powder is undoubtedly the purest and most reliable baking powder offered to the public.
